ROK Troops Smear Sharp Red Attack On Pinpoint Hill

SEOUL, Sunday, Nov. 15—(AP)—Dug-in South Korean infantrymen on Pinpoint Hill, crest of Sniper Ridge, threw back a sharp Red attack in fog and subfreezing cold at dawn today.

The Chinese struck with a platoon, about 40 men, at 4:50 this morning. Within an hour they had doubled the size of their attack force.

But the Republic of Korea soldiers, who recaptured the crest yesterday for the 15th time in a month, beat the Reds off by 6:30. The Reds scuttled back into their caves on the Yoke, a maze of tunnels, caves and trenches at the northern end of Sniper Ridge.

The underground network is the jumpoff point for Chinese attacks in the blazing Central Front ridge battle.

Allied fighter-bombers pounded it yesterday. . forward observer reported direct bomb hits.

Reds Still Hold Yoke

ROK troops have tried repeatedly to force the Chinese out of the Yoke. While the Yoke is in Red hands, Allied control of Pinpoint is shaky.

Other South Koreans, driving some 120 Reds before them, stole up on little Finger Ridge, a stony offshoot of the main mass of Sniper Ridge, during last night.

After sporadic fighting through the night, the ROKs held the hill at mid-morning, a U. S. Eighth Army briefing officer said.

About 20 miles west of Sniper, U. N. troops withdrew on orders late last night from Jackson Heights, a rugged formation north of Chorwon. The Allies have won and lost the position several times since Friday. The Eighth Army briefing officer said he did not know the reason for the latest orders to the U. N. troops to pull back from the heights.

Sabres Down One MIG

The aerial war flared anew in clearing weather. U. S. Sabrejets reported their first kill in nine days. The Air Force said Sabres shot down a Communist MIG deep over Northwest Korea.

U. S. F-84 Thunderjets struck at a large Communist troop concentration west of the North Korean capital at Pyongyang. Pilots said they destroyed 70 buildings.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force reported the loss of three Allied planes in the week ended Friday midnight. None was lost in combat. They were lost to ground fire and other causes, the Air Force said. For the first time in nearly 15 months Allied pilots made no claim of shooting down a Communist plane during a week.

Crash Fatal To 44 Troops Near Seoul

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 15—(AP)—A big Air Force Flying Boxcar carrying U. S. troops and a load of Christmas presents from Japan crashed into a mountain near Seoul yesterday, killing all 44 persons aboard.

The Air Force called it the "worst transport disaster" since the Korean War began. The troops were on their way back to war duty after short five-day leaves in Japan.

A ground party reached the burned wreckage late Saturday and expected to return to the Seoul area about midnight with the bodies of 37 soldiers and seven Air Force crewmen.

The plane smashed into a "V" shaped point about 2,200 feet high where two mountain ridges joined some 18 miles east of Seoul. The terrain was so rugged helicopters could not land.

A reporter who accompanied the ground party to the scene said four of the victims were in parachute harness with their 'chutes open. No one could say whether they had cleared the plane before it crashed.

Most of the bodies were horribly mangled or charred. The Air Force made no identification of the victims pending notification of relatives.

However, a Far East Air Force spokesman announced the highest ranking soldier aboard was a warrant officer and the highest ranking flier was a captain.

Warehousemen Threaten Strike In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15—(AP)—A threatened strike of 500 wholesale grocery warehousemen continued to hang over St. Louis today amid reports that full efforts of a strike, if called, would not be felt for about one week.

No further talks have been scheduled between officials of the AFL Warehouse and Distribution Workers Union, Local 688, and the Missouri-Illinois food distributors.

Roland Maurath, executive secretary of the management group, said if the strike begins Monday it would have to continue for at least one week before its effects would be felt by consumers.

He said the 3,300 retail stores served by his association have "an ample backlog" of food supplies.

Richard Kavner, spokesman for Local 688, said four independent wholesale grocery firms appeared willing to discuss wages with the union, one of the points which has blocked settlement efforts.

Strike instructions have been given the union members but the workers were not told the time the strike is scheduled to start, although union officials say they have fixed the time.

Ralph C. Patterson of the Federal Mediation Service said the union undoubtedly is withholding the exact starting time of the strike "in order to gain the best psychological advantage."

Five large supermarket organizations are not involved in the dispute over wages and other considerations.

St. Joe Boy Remains Unconscious After Fall

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 15—(AP)—Larry Lynn Hale, 14, was still unconscious tonight as a result of head injuries suffered Friday night when he fell from a roof while watching a basketball game here.

Because the Eagleville High School gymnasium was crowded, Larry and a group of boys were watching the game from a roof.

Their movements there disconnected wiring to a scoreboard and when the school janitor went out to investigate the boys fled.

Young Hale either fell from the gymnasium roof or from the roof of an adjoining shed. His head struck a concrete sidewalk. He is at a Bethany Hospital.

Talking Bird Dies At St. Louis Zoo

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—Big Boy, the St. Louis Zoo's talking mynah, died today after a four-year career of entertaining zoo visitors.

When the bird arrived here it could speak only a foreign language, believed to be Malayan.

He learned enough English from Zoo Director George P. Vierheller and Vierheller's assistant, Mrs. Hattie Conway, to say "good morning," "just fine, thank you" when asked about his health, a few complimentary remarks about St. Louis weather, and "goodby, now."

Big Boy leaves behind two understudies.

Jurors Suggest Willing Alternates

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 15—(AP)—Quite a few folks who didn't want to serve on the Circuit Court jury panel next week today made suggestions to Judge Sam Wilcox.

Two of those called suggested their wives be summoned in their place.

One suggested his brother. One said he couldn't serve but that his boss would like to.

Several said fellow workers were anxious to take their places as jurors.

Mrs. Steffens Dies At St. Joe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 15 (AP)—Mrs. Cleta Mooers Steffens, wife of Eugene H. Steffens, president of the Plymouth Clothing Co., died this morning after an illness of two weeks.

Prowler Gains Revenge For Two Interruptions

"Ha, Ha" came the noise over the telephone to Wayne Countryman, 604 East Broadway, about 6:15 a.m. Saturday, and the brief sentence "You didn't catch me that time. I'll be back." It was a prowler Countryman had chased twice in the early hours of the morning.

About 4:30 a. m. Countryman was awakened by a noise in his garage. He went to the garage and as he approached the prowler disappeared. About 5:15 a. m. he again was awakened and again the prowler eluded him as he approached.

Adding insult to injury, the prowler awakened Countryman with his telephone call from a pay station at 6:15. This was too much and he then notified the police of the visitor.

Recruits Face Grim Prospect Over Holidays

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—Basic training will continue through the coming Christmas and New Year period for most of the recruits in the armed forces, the Defense Department disclosed today.

The Army had previously announced its intention to continue recruit training through the festive season, except for one-day passes which may be given individual recruits on Christmas and New Year Day.

Army personnel engaged in advanced and specialized training and those who are assigned to tactical units, however, stand to get about eight days of leave during the holiday season. The Army has ordered suspension of all except basic training from Dec. 20 to Jan. 5. The Army said this means that normally about half of those eligible will be given leave over Christmas and the remainder over the New Year.

The Navy holiday schedule calls for the suspension of advanced and specialized training from Dec. 20 to Jan. 4 and will permit recruits who came completed six weeks at boot camps to take leave during the festive season. But such time off will be substracted from the leave normally granted men upon completion of basic training. The Navy has interpreted this ruling to mean that men who report to recruit training centers on or after Nov. 7 will be ineligible for holiday leave.

The Air Force likewise will continue both basic training and crew training throughout the last two weeks of December and the first week of the New Year. But regional commanders have been instructed to be as liberal as possible in granting time off for other personnel.

The Marine Corps holiday schedule likewise continues basic training and prohibits extended leaves for men earmarked as replacements for overseas units.

Other training schedules will be arranged to permit Christmas leave up to one week by extending the training periods for the same number of days.

Homicide Squad Gets Six New Officers

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15—(AP)—Six officers will be added to the St. Louis Police Department's homicide squad tomorrow, including the squad's first Negro members.

Police Chief Jeremiah O'Connell, who announced the addition today, said the increase, ordered by the Board of Police Commissioner, would bring the squad's membership to 17 officers.

House Inquiry Finds No Proof Of Jury Fixing In St. Louis

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—House investigators said today they are reluctant to think the Justice Department tampered with a St. Louis grand jury probe of the Internal Revenue Bureau in 1951, but they rapped officials for displaying "a definite lack of a sense of values."

Included in the scope of this criticism was Ellis N. Slack and the men who were his superiors in the department in 1951. Slack is now head of the appellate section in the department's tax division.

He was given that post in September upon being relieved as acting head of the division by Attorney General McGranery. The action followed shortly after Slack's appearance before the House Judiciary subcommittee which issued today's report.

The group, headed by Rep. Chelf (D-Ky) was set up to investigate operations of the Justice Department.

"It would appear that there has been a definite lack of a sense of values or an ability on the part of some public servants to separate the big wood from the brush," the subcommittee said in a report to the House.

Slack Defends His Role

Slack vigorously defended his role in the St. Louis grand jury investigation, saying during the subcommittee hearings that he had not interfered with it or attempted to head off any indictments.

He was sent to St. Louis early in 1951 by J. Howard McGrath, then attorney general, after the U. S. district attorney, the late Drake Watson, had appealed to McGrath for help.

Slack's superiors then, in addition to McGrath, were Deputy Attorney General Peyton Ford, since resigned, and T. Lamar Caudle, then head of the tax division. Caudle was fired late last year by President Truman. Slack took over as acting head of the tax division, serving until McGranery relieved him in September.

Slack advised the St. Louis grand jury on policies and considerations which the Internal Revenue Bureau used for dropping prosecution of tax cases.

Subsequently, the grand jury returned a partial report giving a clean bill of health to the handling of tax cases by St. Louis Revenue Bureau officials. One grand juror called this report a "whitewash."

District Judge George H. Moore termed it "astonishing" and, in an affidavit to the House group, charged that it was prompted by Slack. Judge Moore eventually made a new change to the grand jury, which then returned 33 indictments.

One of the indictments named James P. Finnegan, who had resigned as Collector of Internal Revenue at St. Louis. He was later convicted of misconduct in office. His appeal is pending.

The committee report included Slack's denial of instigating the partian report, but the committee concluded "he became a party to it by pronouncing it 'splendid.'"

The report went on:

"His (Slack's) inability or unwillingness to discuss freely his instructions or conversations with his superiors, even when such revelations might have put himself in a better light, marks Ellis Slack as a loyal soldier whose original devotion to principle and legal tradition was dulled in the corrosive Washington fog."

Williams Confers With Ike

Seattle Man Talks With The General About Cabinet Post

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 15 (AP) — President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower conferred today with Walter Williams, Seattle businessman, and Williams said afterward they discussed "in a general way" the possibility of his taking a cabinet post.

Williams, who head the National Citizens for Eisenhower Committee during the campaign, said in response to questions at a news conference that he feels his background might qualify him to serve either as secretary of commerce or secretary of the interior.

He declined to say whether Eisenhower actually had offered him a cabinet assignment in the new Republican administration.

Williams, 57, heads Continental Inc., in Seattle — an insurance, banking and mortgage firm. He said he came to Eisenhower's vacation retreat primarily to discuss the future of the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee, generally credited with having played a major role in helping to win the presidential nomination and the election for the general. The organization's efforts were directed mainly toward winning the support of independent votes and disgruntled Democrats.

After meeting with Williams for two hours at the Augusta National Golf Club, Eisenhower issued a statement saying that the self-styled political amateurs of the citizens committee and those whose support they won must "maintain an active interest in politics and government."

But there was no final decision as to what the mechanics of maintaining such interest will be.

Williams was asked which cabinet post—assuming for the moment that he was in the running—he would prefer.

He said there are "two spots" for which he believes his background might qualify him. He mentioned the Commerce Department first and then the Interior Department.

AF Moves To Remedy British Ire

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The U. S. Air Force is taking direct action to combat reported bad feeling between some British civilians and American airmen in Britain.

Maj. Gen. Francis H. Griswold has scheduled a series of flying visits to all nine major American air bases in England, beginning Monday, to lecture on the importance of good behavior. He is commander of the U. S. Third Air Force in Britain.

A reindoctrination campaign is under way to drive home to fliers and ground staffs alike—a total of 45,000 men — the desirability of maintaining friendly relations with their British allies.

The Air Force also has started on-the-spot checks of conditions in cities near American bases, publicized by some British newspapers as trouble zones.

Officers said today the investigation so far has showed little evidence of serious trouble between the airmen and civilians, though they did not deny some antagonism. They blamed Communists and sensationalized reports of occasional trouble for stirring up much of the bad feeling.

Griswold told a reporter that incidents are relatively few and often are considerably exaggerated.

"We have every reason to believe that the behavior of our forces generally is good," the general said. "We aim to make sure it stays that way."

The Air Force's counteraction followed publication last week of a report by a private 14-member British and American group saying "the situation is serious" and calling for joint British and American action to correct it.

The Communists are exploiting the situation by an organized "Yanks go home" campaign, this group said, and the campaign "is being echoed by certain extreme nationalist elements here."

The group includes David Linebaugh, U. S. Embassy political affairs officer; Richard P. Taylor, embassy cultural officer; British Laborite member of Parliament Patrick Gordon Walker and several editors interested in bettering Anglo-American relations.

COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE CAST IN JAIL: The entire cast of the Community Playhouse cast got themselves in jail the other night but they expect to break out again in time to present "Very Untruly Yours," Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 18 and 19. The setting of the play is in a jail cell—the lead in the play gets himself in jail on purpose and that is just what the cast did, too, just to get the atmosphere they needed to put them in the right mood. Back row: Mrs. Harold Shelley, Mrs. Ted Gardner and Miss Beverly Couhig. Front row, Dick Martinez, Bob Harvey, Paul Burke and Larry Riley.

Play's Cast Spends Time In Local Jail

The Community Playhouse cast for the comedy "Very Untruly Yours", which will be presented at Smith-Cotton High School Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, got themselves in jail a few nights ago—but even iron bars and cell doors won't keep them from putting on the comedy.

The key to the cell door opens up a series of funny situations and plenty of laughs when a young college professor, who writes true confessions on the side, tries to find solitude in a jail cell in hopes he can finish a story by the magazine deadline, but even a jail cell doesn't provide solitude—at least on visiting day—and the poor professor finds that he is bothered constantly by the visitors.

But he got himself in jail and it was easier to get in that to get out—what happens?—does he finish the story?—does he marry the girl who came to town at the wrong time and complicates things for him in the first place?—does he get out of jail?—well, the answers to all those questions will be answered when the cast gets in the jail cell on the Smith-Cotton stage.

The part of the college professor by day who becomes "Annie Laurie" the true confessions' writer at night will be taken by Bob Harvey. Other members of the cast are Paul Burke, Douglas Kennedy, Richard Martinez, Mrs. Ted Gardner, Mrs. Harold Shelley, Larry Riley, John Erickson, Beverly Couhig and Mrs. Richard Richel. They all went to the county jail to pose for a picture.

Mrs. Don Lamm Jr. is director of the play.

Munitions Boom On GOP Victory

TOKYO, Nov. 15 (AP)—Munitions stocks boomed in Japan this week.

Kyodo news agency said the impetus was the Republican presidential victory and a resulting general expectation that Japan's rearmament would be accelerated.

Missourian Represents Florida In Congress

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. Nov. 15 (AP)—Florida's first district will be represented in Congress by a native of Missouri.

He is Courtney W. Campbell, Tampa, Fla., who was born and attended high school here. His mother, Mrs. T. C. Campbell, and a sister, Mrs. Mervin Cies, still live here.

4-H Banquet Entertains Everyone---Even A Puppy

The second annual 4-H banquet was a success Saturday night when the 4-H youngsters, their parents, their leaders and their small brothers and sisters who will someday be 4-H'ers, too, swarmed into the Smith-Cotton cafeteria as guests of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce.

Roy Coplen, county extension agent and director of the Agriculture committee of the hamber of Commerce welcomed them at the door and, with the help of other C. of C. members, sent the farm people into lines that formed on two sides of the large room.

In white aprons were the Chamber of Commerce president, Claude L. Boul, the past president, Jack Cunningham, the executive manager, Chester A. Brown, the agriculture committee chairman, Leon Archias, and other members of the Chamber of Commerce: Abe Silverman,, Harold Seaberg, Mrs. Ike L. Warren, Elmer Adams, Ray Lippard, C. L. Carter, Maurice Hogan, Ivan Berry, Myron Linquist, George Routszong, Bert Hathaway, Harry Naugel, Fred Karigan, Claude Smith and Olen Monsees. They were kept mighty busy for about an hour and a half, showing people to tables, pouring coffee and water, helping small youngsters with their trays and doing everything they could to show the 4-H youngsters and the grownups a good time, and there was no doubt that they were all having just that, from the comments of big and little.

In the kitchen, under the direction of Mrs. Norman Scotten, the women and high school girls smiled as they dished out the turkey, dressing, potatoes and gravy and all the rest of the dinner and handed the plates out steadily as the line moved quickly along. They served about a thousand people in an hour and a half, starting at 6 o'clock and giving out the last plate at 7:30.

While the children too little to be 4-H members enjoyed a show in the Little Theatre, their mothers and dads, their 4-H brothers and sisters and 4-H leaders went to the high school auditorium where the recognition program was held.

The meeting was called to order by the 4-H pledge and pledge to the flag, by Lillian Bahner, 4-H council president.

Miss Dunham Leads Singing

Group singing was led by Jincy Dunham followed by a word of appreciation to the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce by Lillian Bahner. All of the Chamber of Commerce members helping at the banquet were introduced.

The response was ade by Claude Boul, president, and Chester A. Brown, secretary-manager.

A talk on "The Farm Bureau Contribution to 4-H Club Work" was given by C. S. Arnold, president of Pettis County Farm Bureau.

There was recognition of leaders, members and parents and the awarding of ten and 11-year pins.

Medals were awarded to county winners as follows: Agriculture awards: tractor maintenance, Dale Norfleet, Prairie Ridge; meat, animal, Linton Reid, Prairie Ridge; leadership, Howard Brown, South Abell; poultry, Mary Alice Tuckwiller, Prairie Ridge; achievement, Shirley Wehman, Ionia; garden, Grace Schneider, South Abell; and Wilburn Hayes, considered for

President Intends To Brief General On Present Policy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—Officials said today President Truman's primary purpose in his historic meetings with President-elect Eisenhower next Tuesday will be to make certain that Eisenhower is informed on major world problems and how the present administration intends to deal with them.

Informants familiar with the plans for the sessions said, at the same time, that they will cover several other points of great importance:

1. The Truman administration will urge Eisenhower to name his top cabinet members dealing with foreign and security problems — state, defense and treasury—within two weeks and direct them to begin working with their Truman administration predecessors here around Dec. 1 at the latest. What action will be taken along this line is, of course, a matter for Eisenhower to decide.

2. The administration is also prepared to tell the general and his advisors that a statement by him on the Korean situation, endorsing the present policy of insisting on voluntary repatriation of prisoners of war in any armistice agreement, would greatly strengthen the United States in dealing with other nations at the U. N. General Assembly.

3. Eisenhower will have an opportunity to express his views about the foreign policy problems and the present administration's intentions, as these are presented to him. Highly placed officials said that Truman will take any Eisenhower views into consideration in making the decision that have to be made between now and Jan. 20.

4. The meetings will afford an opportunity for the outgoing and incoming President to symbolize the unity which both men have declared they would like to demonstrate to the rest of the world by a joint statement, assuming they can agree on one.

Two Meetings Scheduled

According to present plans Truman and Eisenhower will hold two meetings. First and probably for a brief time only, they will meet privately. Some authorities here believe that in this face-to-face session, the President will seek to emphasize to the President - elect that he is deeply anxious to do whatever he can to arrange for a smooth transfer of administration which will prevent the Soviets from taking advantage of any uncertainty in American policies during the transition period.

From the private session the plan is for the two men to go immediately to the Cabinet Room and join a second and larger session with their advisors. In this meeting are scheduled to be Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Lovett, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, and W. Averell Harriman, foreign aid director. On Eisenhower's side are expected to be Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, his representative to executive departments of the government, and Joseph M. Dodge, his special representative to the Budget Bureau.

Eisenhower's headquarters at Augusta, Ga., indicated a week ago that the general would not assume responsibility for government decisions prior to Jan. 20 because he has no authority for making such decisions. Persons familiary with President Truman's views say that he is fully prepared to make all his own decisions and has no thought of asking Eisenhower to assume responsibility for them.

Foreign Policy First

The practical responsibility which the administration would like the general to take is that of a voice in the shaping of foreign policy decisions to the extent that Truman may avoid taking any step which would later be reversed or radically changed by the new administration.

The President's State and Defense Department advisors and presumably Truman himself feel that the best way to accomplish this is to get Eisenhower's future secretaries of state and defense into those departments by the end of this month so that they can look over the shoulders of Acheson and Lovett as policies are being formulated. It is felt here that competent executives would be able informally — if authorized by Eisenhower — to indicate lines of desirable action or limitations on policy without formally committing the Eisenhower administration for the future.

Three Persons Hurt In A Kansas Wreck

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 15 (AP)—Three persons were injured today in a traffic accident four miles east of Tonganoxie on U. S. Highway 24-40.

They were Jack Henry, Kansas City, his mother, Mrs. Mary Henry, Tonganoxie, and Henry's son, Rickie. All were taken to a Kansas City, Kan., hospital.

Paul Kiernan, deputy sheriff, said the driver of the other car, R. T. Coleman, was booked on a charge of careless driving.

Car Damages Control Box

A traffic control box governing the lights at Broadway and Ohio was damaged about 9:45 a. m. Saturday by a hit-and-run driver. The lights were knocked out of commission for about two hours. A police officer was assigned to the corner during the period of repair.

Acheson Seeks Pledge By Ike On War Views

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Nov. 15 (AP)—In an effort to take the lame duck tag off the U. S. delegation to the United Nations, Secretary of State Acheson will seek assurances from President-elect Eisenhower next week that he supports present American diplomatic policy in Korea.

A spokesman said the secretary will sit in on Eisenhower's conferences with President Truman to get an "indication of Ike's approach" to the question of forcibly sending home Red prisoners who say they don't want to go as well as to other questions facing the U. N.

The spokesman said Acheson is well aware that Eisenhower neither could nor would take responsibility for decisions reached before inauguration day next Jan. 20, but hopes for an expression of his "general views."

Decision Termed Bipartisan

The U. S. delegation has repeatedly told representatives of other countries here that the refusal to send home North Korean and Chinese prisoners at the point of a bayonet is a bi-partisan decision, reached after wide conferences in Washington and after ascertaining the views of other countries with troops in Korea.

The delegation has also said the American view on such problems as Morocco and Tunisia and U. S. contributions to the U. N. budget will not be sensationally different under a Republican administration. The budget position was pointed up by having Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis), prospective chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the new Congress, handle it here.

Many Delegates Uneasy

Despite these assurances, many delegations have been uneasy about new American policy and have hesitated to back up U. S. stands which they fear might change overnight.

Uncertainty about the real authority of the U. S. delegation as well as the stone-wall opposition of the Soviet bloc to the policy of voluntary repatriation has slowed the Korean debate to a crawl.

Joao Carlo Muniz of Brazil, chairman of the 60-nation Political Committee which is debating the issue, called on members today to speed up their work.

Sheriff Holds Two Youths With $14,130

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Nov. 15—(AP)—Two boys carrying $14,130 in bank-wrapped bills, which they said they found near the home of a recluse who had died, were taken off a bus by Missouri Highway patrolmen today.

Capt. O. L. Wallis of the patrol identified the youths as Gerald Marcel Collier, 15, of route 1 Jonesboro, Ill., and John Chupp, 17, of route 1, LaSalle, Ill. They were held without charge at the Fredericktown jail pending further investigation.

Wallis quoted the boys as saying they found the money about two weeks ago and had $1,000 hidden in a sewer and another $1,000 in a store near their homes.

Captain Wallis said a jeweler in Farmington, north of here, noticed they had a large amount of money when they bought a watch from him. The jeweler, whose identification was not available immediately, notified the St. Francois County sheriff's office which in turn called highway patrolmen.

The boys didn't say where they were going, Wallis said, but the bus from which they were removed was bound for Memphis.

Weather Balloon Sets Kansas Town Talking About Flying Saucers

PITTSBURG, Kan., Nov. 15 (AP)—A "flying saucer" hung over the town of Pittsburg for hours this afternoon.

Hundreds of citizens telephoned newspapers and radio stations to report the round object hovering in the skies.

As the sun changed its course, the "saucer" changed color, turning from white to orange and finally to red.

Radio Station KSEK appealed to listeners who had telescopes to train them on the object.

Then the mystery was solved.

The "saucer" had a rope lying across its top.

It was a weather observation balloon.

By sundown the balloon was drifting slowly to the east—and still the calls came in.

Widow of Sedalia Congressman First Congresswoman from State

Missouri's first congresswoman is the widow of the late John B. Sullivan who grew up in Sedalia. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick F. Sullivan and his father was a conductor on the MKT. John went to St. Louis, but he always had a warm spot in his heart for his old home town — he was so glad when he found someone from Sedalia, especially after he went to Washington. And if they were from East Sedalia that was better still.

John B. Sullivan, who was born in Sedalia, went to Washington, in 1941 as a congressman, and the slim brown haired Mrs. Sullivan went along — thinking she would be a congressional wife. In reality she found herself a congressional apprentice, so anxious was she to help her husband do his job. She saw that the work was tremendous and she tried to take over some of the responsibility. Then she began to work with him — she studied the legislation — she argued with him in an effort to bring out all the points of the bills that came up.

Assistant to Husband

At first she worked with him closely, unofficially, then, in 1945 when he went back again, she became his administrative assistant. She "sort of took over" his office.

Mrs. Sullivan was born in South St. Louis and has been a Democrat ever since she could remember. Although her father used to herd his family to the poles each election day, she is the only one of nine sons and daughters who went in for professional politics. She wouldn't be in, either, but John Sullivan, whom she had met years before in a dentist's office, was walking a political path which led to Washington.

There in the capital their social life was quiet and they spent most of the time away from the office and congressional halls in a study of legislation.

"Sullivans of Missouri"

He wanted to be the best representative possible from the state they both loved so much — Missouri — and they both worked so much on the job in Congress that they became known in Washington as "the Sullivans of Missouri."

Then John died in January, 1951. After his death, Representative Leonard Irving of Missouri asked Mrs. Sullivan to work for him, but she declined until she could place her husband's staff members. She found a job for one in another Congressman's office, took the other two with her and went to work for Irving until she came home to campaign.

In a feature story about Mrs. Sullivan in the St. Louis Post Dispatch by Mary Kinbrough, the writer tells of the campaign waged by the first woman congressman from Missouri. She didn't have the finances for campaign headquarters — so she had her headquarters in the basement of her mother's home. She couldn't have gotten along without her mother, she said.

Since last March she has been campaigning morning til night and volunteer workers helped her a great deal. She did all her own stenographic work, and her own advertising. She met with as many people as possible talking over their problems.

MISSOURI'S FIRST CONGRESSWOMAN is Mrs. John B. Sullivan, widow of a former congressman who was a native of Sedalia. She will represent the third congressional district. She is shown here packing to leave on a Florida vacation before reporting to Washington for duties in the House of Representatives. In the recent election she defeated Republican incumbent Claude I. Bakewell. (AP Wirephoto).

Campaigns on "Issues"

"And I did base my campaign on issues alone," Mrs. Sullivan said, "I didn't bring up personalities, because I don't think that's the way to get votes. John didn't believe in it, and neither do I."

Mrs. Sullivan, who defeated Republican incumbent, Representative Claude I. Bakewell, has pledged herself to follow faithfully the policies endorsed by her late husband, who died a few months after his election to his fourth term in the House of Representatives.

During her campaign, she said, she found that the cost of living seemed to be the principal issue, especially among the women, and of course Korea was always discussed.

Prices Get Her Attention

"I think a woman is especially qualified in the areas of human need and such matters as rising prices," she said, "She's the one who goes to the grocery store more and she knows how much more a loaf of bread costs now than it used to."

Mrs. Sullivan said that everytime she made a speech in the campaign she would ask herself what John would have thought about certain issues and she said, "I know that every time I consider a bill in Washington I'll think first what John would have said about it."

And so, with a successful campaign behind her, the second member of the former husband and wife team will go back to Washington — but this time she is on her own — officially elected as the first congresswoman from Missouri.

Original Ike Booster Gay Over Election

PONCA CITY, Okla., Nov. 15 (AP) —Just before the election a Ponca City druggist bought a full page in a newspaper, not to sell his pills but to make a last prediction — that Dwight D. Eisenhower would be elected president.

It culminated a one-man campaign T. J. Cuzalina started back in 1946 to get Ike in the White House. During that time he predicted in paid - for newspaper space: Eisenhower would run only if he was convinced he was needed: Sen. Byrd D-Va would support him; Truman would not seek another term in 1952, and that the general would be nominated on the first ballot.

And now that his man is in?

"It was a tremendous victory," Cuzalina says, "but now I'm through with politics. I can go back to just selling pills and get politics out of my column. I'm going to leave this country in the good hands of Eisenhower and devote my column to humor.

"The only thing I want out of this election is maybe getting to play a little golf with Ike. After he won I just sent him the same greetings I put in a wire when he was nominated: "Hot ziggety dog! Congratulations. T. J."

From 1946 on, Cuzalina never once left up in his drive. An unwavering faith, plus a phenomenal ability as a self-educated publicity man, resulted in slogan contests on behalf of the general, letters to all the nation's druggists to promote his candidacy, distribution of Ike buttons and a daily column in a local newspaper.

Friends hail the personable, sharp-witted druggist, sone of an Italian immigrant family, as the original Eisenhower booster.

Cuzalina's first efforts for Ike came after a group of his cronies were mulling over the problems of the day at his soda fountain and the discussion got around to the man they'd like to see be the next president.

Eisenhower, then still in Europe, was mentioned and the more Cuzalina thought of the general, the better he liked the idea.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," he told the fellows. "I'll plug Ike in my column and we'll order 5,000 Ike buttons just to see what happens."

Dee Donohoe, Ponca City real estate man, agreed to halve the cost of the buttons. They shelled out $82.50 apiece.

And into Cuzalina's daily column, "Just Poppin Off," which he pays for and uses to discuss the events of the day, went the first of thousands of words on behalf of Ike.

"After a while Donohoe lost interest but I kept up the campaign," Cuzalina recalls.

After Eisenhower eliminated himself in 1948, Cuzalina set about booming the general for 1952. He started working through the nation's druggists, compiling a list of 80,000 names and sending letters to his colleagues urging formation of Eisenhower for president clubs.

He started mailing his column to 300 newspapers and promoted a contest, giving $1,000 for the best slogan.

Mrs. Joe Kanewske of Galveston, Tex., won with "Get right with Ike."

Then came more buttons, more letters and more words in his column about Eisenhower.

He estimates more than 120,000 letters were sent out from his store. His only help was a couple of high school girls working part time. The incoming mail was just as voluminous. He received more than 100,000 letters and thousands of clippings from newspapers and magazines.

Cuzalina won't say how much he's spent on behalf of Eisenhower. But it's all his money. He accepted no contributions.

"I'll tell you one thing though," he said. "I've spent more than $2,700 just for 3-cent stamps."

After the convention, Cuzalina met Ike for the first time.

The druggist took five days off from his work — the first time that he can remember taking a vacation — to play some golf at Denver. The general was there playing a little golf, too.

"I didn't know how to approach the general so I asked one of the fellows in the club house," Cuzalina related.

"He told me to just go right up and say hello. So I went up and said hello. And the general said 'Doggone it, hello there.' I told the general I sure hoped he'd win and he said, 'I think I'll do all right."

A Democrat class ad will do it.

Soviets Told Truman Lost Votes to Ike

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda told Russians today that unpopularity of President Truman's policies —particularly the Korean War—decided Gen. Eisenhower's victory in the U. S. presidential election.

"Voters balloted not so much for Eisenhower," Pravda said in a front page, two-column wide editorial, "but against Truman and his administration, which the American people charged with responsibility for unleashing the Korean war, high prices and taxes and corruption."

The editorial was the most detailed report on the election to appear thus far in the Russian press. It also included news of Eisenhower's declaration that he would go to Korea for an on-the-spot study of the fighting, a decision Pravda described as a "tactical maneuver."

Western observers considered as significant the fact the editorial refrained from any personal attack on the president-elect.

Pravda did charge, however, that Eisenhower was elected by a minority of the American people, giving its readers the impression that most Americans did not want him.

The newspaper said that 98,400,000 Americans were qualified to vote and of this total 33,029,308 cast their ballots for Eisenhower.

"The remaining voters," Pravda added, "either voted against him or boycotted the elections."

Since between 95 and 99 per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots in a Soviet election, Russian readers are quite likely to regard the statement that 65 million Americans did not vote for Eisenhower as proof they did not want him.

The editorial said the Republicans shoved the blame for the Korean War on the Democrats "covering up the undeniable fact that the Korean War is a child of the bipartisan policy of Democrats and Republicans and that an especially active role in the unleashing of this war was played by John Foster Dulles, the outstanding foreign affairs specialist of the Republican Party."

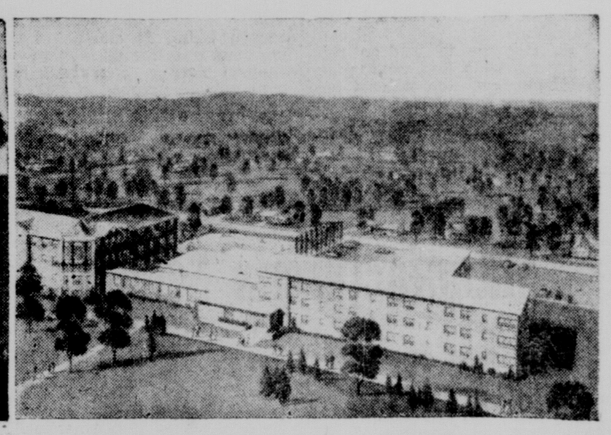
Soviet commentators have bitterly attacked Dulles. At the start of the Korean War, Moscow newspapers accused the U. S. of fomenting the strife and declared that Dulles actually gave the signal that touched off the fighting.

Railroader, Hurt, Attracts Attention By Using Air Hose

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Injured and unable to shout because of shock, a New Haven Railroad brakeman used an air hose connection to summon aid today as he lay between two cars of a freight train which was about to move.

George C. Burns, 47, of Westport, Conn., suffered a dislocated shoulder and cuts and bruises in a fall to the tracks.

Hardly able to move, Burns reached up from his perilous position and disconnected the air brake hose connection. Other train men found him when they checked the loss of pressure in the air brake hose.



ADDITIONAL DORMITORIES FOR CENTRAL MISSOURI STATE COLLEGE STUDENTS—Including furnishings, the cost of the dormitories will exceed $1,000,000. Construction is beginning immediately, and it is hoped that the dormitories will be completed next fall, and that they will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the 1953 winter term. The two buildings are being constructed to meet demands for more student dormitory facilities, President G. W. Diemer, said.

Both new dormitories will be adjacent to the existing structures, East Hall (above, left), men's dormitory, and Laura J. Yeater Hall, women's dormitory (above right).

The women's unit will house about 150 students and will be the flexible type, and will be modernistic in design. Plans call for full dining facilities, in the connected dining room which will accommodate 400 persons.

Commenting on the recent federal government loan, President Diemer said that $900,000 will be borrowed for the dormitory construction program from the Federal Housing and Home Finance agency. The approved bond issue will be for 20 years, and the interest rate is two and three-fourth per cent.

Candidate Card from 1906 Shows Pettis Precinct Growth

A candidate card of C. S. Williams, Democratic candidate for Recorder of Pettis County, used in the election of 1906, was mailed to the Democrat-Capital by Ernest Winston, Knob Noster. It was interting to not on the reverse side of the card were the precincts in Pettis County showing the vote of the candidates for governor in the 1904 election.

It would be noted Candidate Folk, Democrat, trailed Candidate Walbridge, Republican, as did E. T. Behrens, Socialist. Candidate Behrens was a resident of Sedalia, being a publisher of a labor paper and one-time president of the Sedalia Federation of Labor.

Williams, whose name appeared on the official ballot as Charles S. Williams, opposed Walter Morey, Republican, who won the election in November, 1906, by a majority of 360 votes.

Back in 1906 Pettis County had only 25 precincts. Sedalia was divided into four precincts instead of wards. Only four voting places were here in that year. In the county there were 21 precincts.

In recent years the city was divided into four wards with three precincts in the first, three in the second five in the third and five in the fourth. Thus there is an increase of 12 precincts in the city alone over 1906.

Out in the county nine precincts were added. They are: Flat Creek No. 2, Heath Creek No. 3, La Monte No. 2, Longwood No. 2, Prairie No. 1, Sedalia Township No. 1, and Sedalia Township No. 2, Smithton No. 2, and Washington No. 2.

State C. of C. Backs 'Right to Work' Law Movement In Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—Missouri businessmen apparently are behind a move by the State Chamber of Commerce to get a "right to work" law enacted in Missouri.

The State Chamber reported that of 961 employers who answered a questionnaire only 13 voted against the proposed legislation and 11 refused to express an opinion.

Under a right to work law, as enacted in 13 other states, workers would be assured of a chance at work whether they belonged to a labor union or not. As set up in the other states it bars the closed shop, the union shop or the agency shop.

The State Chamber said 392 votes for such a law came from St. Louis and Kansas City, 407 from the rest of the state. Unsigned votes came from 137 other businessmen and one was from outside the state, the report said.

Czechoslovakia Food Shortage Worsens

VIENNA (AP) — Czechoslovakia's food shortage, which caused hunger demonstrations a few weeks ago, is no better—possibly even worse — since the harvest was brought in, reports reaching Vienna said today.

The shortage of food has reached a point where official Communist newspapers admit that no eggs are available except on the black market and that workers leave their jobs for hours to queue up for potatoes. Besides a potato famine, there are shortages of all root crops and fruit, diplomatic reports say.

Food is short in the cities and towns largely because farmers continue to resist the government's collection methods and hide their supplies, these reports add. Additionally, the Communist distribution system is so disorganized that towns often are a week or more without various types of food.

Czech newspapers indicate that Russia, which theoretically supplies Czechoslovakia with half the grain she needs, has not been coming through on time with her deliveries lately.

US Popularity Falls In Japan Over UN Crimes

TOKYO (AP)—The popularity of the United States and other United Nations forces in Japan fell to a post occupation low today over the issue of who should have criminal jurisdiction over U. N. soldiers here.

United Nations countries with troops in Korea and using Japan as a base are asking that they have jurisdiction over their own troops. The United States is backing the stand.

The Japanese press and politicians alike lambasted the proposal today.

The United States already has jurisdiction over its forces under a Japan-U. S. administrative agreement. No agreement has been reached covering other U. N. forces in Japan and the issue is now being negotiated.

The other United Nations in Japan point to the Japanese agreement with the U. S. and claim "discrimination" if they are not accorded the same privileges.

The Japanese answer that the United States troops here are actually to defend Japan while the United Nations forces are here incidental to the Korean War.

The government of Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, with only a slight majority in the Japanese Diet, is being pressed from every side to turn down the United Nations request.

The Diet's legal affairs committee, half of its members Yoshida's own Liberal party, voted unanimously today "for the sake of the honor of the Japanese" against the position of the United Nations countries.

A Democrat class ad will do it. Phone 1000.

US Entering Lower Military Budget Period

PROVIDENCE, R. I., (AP)— Defense Secretary Robert Lovett said today "we are now entering a period of lower military budgets."

Lovett said the major capital investments and the heaviest portion of purchases have been largely authoried and funded. Then he added:

"If this orderly decrease is continued for a short period we should reach a level which can be sustained . . . . . without doing too much damage to our national economy or our social system."

Lovett expressed his views in an address prepared for delivery at a ceremony at Brown University.

The defense secretary did not mention specific figures in his prepared talk. However, there have been unofficial predictions that the military budget for the next fiscal year might be between 39 billion and 41 billion dollars. This would compare with a high since the start of the Korean War of about 60 billion dollars.

Lovett apparently was referring to military budget request to Congress for annual appropriations, not to total military expenditures. While the budget sent to Congress for the next fiscal year starting July 1 may be only in the neighborhood of 40 billion dollars, the Defense Department will have a carry-over from previously appropriated funds of about $59,900,000,000 (B). The actual expenditures thus may run substantially higher than the budget requests.

Lovett cautioned that what is needed is a stabilized military program instead of peaks and valleys of effort, as long as the international situation and threat of war by Russia remains.

"The totalitarian menace that confronts us today is a constant menace," he said. "Our defenses must be geared to the hard realities of this fact and must be fixed in the light of our requirements for our security and our responsibilities.

Local Korea Vets Eligible for 2nd Guaranteed Loan

Central Missouri veterans of the armed forces who have served since the outbreak of the Korean War are eligible for a second guaranteed loan to buy homes and farms, the Veterans Administration said today.

The federal government will guarantee a new loan for veterans who sold homes or farms bought with loans under the world War II GI bill, VA announced.

Loan guaranty provisions of the early bill are extended under the Korean GI bill to veterans who served any place since June 27, 1950.

VA guarantees the lender aginst loss on home loans up to 60 per cent of the loan, with a maximum guaranty of $7,500. On farm or business loans, VA guarantees the lender against loss up to 50 per cent of the loan, with a maximum guaranty of $4,000 on loans involving real estate and $2,000 on those not involving real estate.

Veterans who sell their property and pay off the original loan become eligible for a second full loan. Those who still hold title to property will not get the balance of guaranty remaining under the original GI bill. The balance will be cancelled and reissued under the new bill.

The deadline for using loan guaranty benefits under the original bill is 1957 for most veterans. The deadline for those serving since the start of the Korean War will be 10 years after the present emergency.

Square Dancing Ends Evening

The evening concluded with square dancing in the cafeteria led by Howard Brown and R. D. Kahrs, council recreation leaders.

Jim Perry, assistant county extension agent, in charge of the 4-H programs was around everywhere to see that all was going well, Miss Mae Sverett, county home agent, was taking pictures and Merle Vaughan, from the county extension office, was there helping out, too.

A small brown and white pup was having just about as much fun in the cafeteria as anybody. He just walked in and wandered all over the place, wagging his tail at anybody who looked at him.

The whole affair was quite a sight and the youngsters had a good time even if they did sometimes have difficulty balancing their trays until they got to a table. One little girl just didn't quite make it to a table. Part of her dinner landed on the floor—but she got more.

Polite Bandit Nets $110 At Columbia

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 15 (AP)—A polite bandit brandishing a revolver held up a liquor store here late yesterday and went away with his loot of $110 and a pint bottle of whisky.

Regretfully saying "I hate to do this to you but I need the money" the man relieved Mrs. Mary Darderian co-owner of the store with her husband, Adam, of the money in the cash register. He overlooked some $200 in a drawer beneath the machine.

Police wouldn't say today whether they have any particular suspects.

Truman Authorizes Tax Investigation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 —(AP)—President Truman today authorized a Senate judiciary subcommittee to examine tax returns in its investigation of the Alien Property Office.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Willis Smith (D-N.C.) was given $100,000 six months ago to look into the administration of the Trading with the Enemy Act by the Alien Property Office, a part of the Department of Justice.

It was under this act that the federal government during the last war seized foreign-owned corporations handling millions of dollars of business in this country.

Doctor Removes Tumor Weighing 184 Pounds From Woman In Texas

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 15 (AP)—A tumor weighting 184 pounds has been removed from a 44-year-old mother at John Sealy Hospital here.

The woman was getting along "fine," her doctor reported today.

Dr. Dan Eanes, chief resident in obstetrics and gynecology at the hospital who performed the three-hour operation Thursday, said the tumor was the largest ever removed in the history of the hospital.

He estimated the woman's normal weight at about 130 pounds and quoted the woman as saying the tumor, an ovarian cyst, had developed within the past year.

The woman has several children.

Dr. Eanes said her case became known when a teacher visited the home to see why the children were not attending school regularly. The teacher reported the case to the U. S. Public Health Service.

The surgeon said he was told it was necessary to break down the front door of the woman's modest home to get her out and she needed the help of four persons to arise from a sitting position.

Wet California Hopes Skies Clear By Today

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15 (AP)—The week-end storm which pelted California with rain, snow and hail was expected to give way tomorrow to clearing weather.

Snow 40 inches deep was reported at Donner Summit today with more falling.

Wind gusts up to 60 miles an hour lashed Sacramento.

In Central California, two huge landslides closed the Kern River Canyon road above Kernville.

Scores of motorists in the Los Angeles area were trapped by flooded streets. Firemen, stripping to underwear, rescued dozens of motorists in stalled cars at an intersection of West Los Angeles.

In the San Francisco Bay area, the Oakland Airport was bufeted by winds and rain that caused air traffic trouble.

Twisters accompanying the storm in Southern California caused an estimated $100,000 damage at Paramount Studio here and ripped off roofs at Newport Beach, 65 miles south.

U. N. 'Hospitality' Bill Settled

SRINAGAR, Kashmir (AP)—Premier Sheikh Abdullah's government and the United Nations have just settled their own little financial problem.

It all started two years ago when Australian jurist Sir Owen Dixon and a party of five, including military observer Gen. Courtney R. Hodges, visited Kashmir to help unscramble the Indo-Pakistan argument over Kashmir.

Surprised UN officials here got a bill later from the State Guest House for the month-long "official hospitality" extended to the mission. The bill amounted to $1,097.

Sir Owen and four others had stayed 33 days during June and July, 1950. Gen. Hodges had spent only 12 days in Srinagar, touring the Indo-Pakistan ceasefire line the rest of the time.

While the U. N. waged a cold war over the issue, another U. N. mission came and departed. Finally the U. N. office here paid up in late September.

40 Cars Collide On Foggy Turnpike; Two Sailors Killed

NEWARK, N. J. Nov. 15 (AP)—An almost impenetrable fog caused a nightmare of death and injury on the high speed New Jersey Turnpike early today in seven different chain reaction smashups involving nearly 40 cars.

Two young sailors were killed in the worst tangle of 16 vehicles, and 26 persons in all were injured badly enough to be taken to hospitals. Of these, two were in critical condition.

It was the second such series of crashes in less than 24 hours, and the entire northern part of the toll road was closed down to all traffic for nearly five hours.

Yesterday morning, two men were killed and seven persons hospitalized in two separate fog-induced pileups that blocked both north and southbound lanes for a time in Kearny, just north of here. Twenty-five vehicles, including a bus, were involved.

Lewis, Miners Appeal For Special Notice In Coal Wage Dispute

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP) — Documents made public today show that John L. Lewis and a major portion of the soft coal industry have asked Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam for "special considerations" in their soft coal wage appeal.

Putnam has scheduled a public hearing for Monday morning on the appeal, which asks approval of the full $1.90 daily wage pay boost negotiated in September by Lewis and the industry for 375,000 miners.

The Wage Stabilization Board chopped that down to $1.50, holding that any more would jeopardize the stabilization program.

Lie May Stay If UN Deadlocks On Successor

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Nov. 15—(AP)—Diplomatic sources said today Trygve Lie has stated he is willing to remain another year as U. N. secretary general if the Russians and the West cannot agree on his successor.

There is no indication so far that a deadlock will develop finally on the question of Lie's successor. There are reports that a move is being developed to ask Lie to stay on but at the same time the U. N. halls are full of talk and speculation about various possibilities.

A quiet diplomat from Iran, Nasrollah Entezam, who is a former president of the Assembly, was said to have the inside track in the spirited contest for Lie's post. Entezam has said he is not a candidate but his backers are booming him at every opportunity and are quoting the Russians and British as having no objection to Entezam.

The United States is playing this problem slowly and cautiously. A spokesman said today that it is not urgent and immediate. He said American energies are tied up with things like Korea. He said, however, if a great number of states want to discuss the issue in the next couple of weeks the U. S. would get its ideas in order.

Rail Chief Foresees Peacetime Economy

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 15 (AP)—Signs of a returning "peace-time economy" are seen by Paul J. Neff, chief executive officer of the Missouri Pacific lines in a leveling off of industrial construction and a slight downward trend in prices.

Neff is returning to St. Louis after an inspection tour of the Mo-Pac's 10,000 mile system.

He pointed out there were no longer reports of shortages in consumer goods, such as household appliances, motor cars and the like.

"This," he said in an interview, "seems to show that in spite of a stepped-up production of military material, our industrial production now is able to meet all requirements of our defense and civilian economies."

He was quick to add that this does not mean a "so-called recession," and predicted that business generally in the first six months of 1953 will remain about the same.

GOP Inherits Coplin Case, A Headache

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(AP)—The headaches which the new administration will inherit in January will almost certainly include the knotty question of what to do about former government girl Judith Coplon, twice convicted of spying for Soviet Russia.

Two appeals courts have said she is entitled to re-trial, but for entirely different and somewhat contradictory reasons.

The Supreme Court last January turned down pleas by both the government and Miss Coplon that it take over and point a way out of the legal impasse.

In the present situation, many lawyers regard the whole matter as a legal nightmare which may eventually be dropped entirely.

At the Justice Department, where Miss Coplon once worked, the question of starting the prosecution all over again "continues under study," as it has for nearly a year.

Meanwhile, some authorities on security in the government are known to be strenuously opposed to any new trial entailing further public airings of how internal security secrets are kept, and the methods used by the FBI to counter espionage.

This group takes the position that getting another conviction that would stick to the extent of putting Miss Coplon in prison, would not be worth what it would cost in additional courtroom disclosures of jealousy guarded government files.

All this involves questions of high policy, and the Justice Department right now is not pioneering in the policy field, with a new Republican leadership taking over in about 10 weeks.

So the incoming administration will probably have to make the decision.

Miss Coplon, now 30, meanwhile lives quietly in Brooklyn with her attorney husband, Albert H. Sokolov, who was associated with her defense. They were married after her convictions and have a 9-months-old daughter. She is at liberty under a $60,000 bond.

Under the appeals court decisions for new trial, it is technically up to the former government girl to make the next move for a rehearing. She has not chosen to do so, and in this situation the government itself could take the initiative, if it decided to have another try.

Dorothy Williams Exchanges Vows With Robert Sims

A soft glow of candlelight illuminated the chancel setting of the First Baptist Church, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, November 9, when Miss Dorothy Williams became the bride of Mr. Robert E. Sims. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Williams Sr., 644 East Tenth, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Sims, 620 East Broadway.

Large floor baskets filled with bronze and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the altar amid arrangements of jade foliage and four, seven branch candelabra holding lighted yellow tapers.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. W. Croxton, pastor.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Doris Mae Stott played a medley of organ music which included "To An Evening Star", "Liebestraum", "At Dawning", and "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life". She also accompanied Mr. Russell Maag as he sang, "I Love You Truly", "Through the Years" and "The Lord's Prayer". The traditional wedding marches were used.

The bride was proceeded down the aisle by her matron of honor, Mrs. Dean Morton, and bridesmaids, Mrs. Jerry Iuchs, Miss Rose Marie Reed and Mrs. Tommy Bast, all of Sedalia. The honor attendant wore a floor length gown of rust colored taffeta and net and carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums tied with rust satin ribbon. Mrs. Iuchs was attired in a bronze green gown of identical style and carried yellow chrysanthemums tied with moss green ribbon. Miss Reed and Mrs. Bast, who also served as candlelighters, wore gold colored gowns also styled like the honor attendant's. Their corsages were of bronze chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of white bridal satin fashioned with a tight fitting bodice, high round neck, and long fitted sleeves tapering to a point at the wrist. The deep yoke, of white Chantilly lace and illusion, was appliqued in lace design where it joined the satin bodice. The full skirt of satin, worn over crinoline and hoops, lengthened into a long cathedral train. Her headdress was a tiny Juliet cap of white Chantilly lace outlined in seed pearls and held a fingertip illusion of silk net. She carried a large shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Clyde Williams Jr., Norfolk, Va., brother of the bride, served as best man and ushers were Mr. Kenneth Farley, Mr. LeRoy Iuchs, Mr. Jerry Iuchs and Mr. James Askren, all of Sedalia.

Mrs. Williams, mother of the bride, wore a black crepe dress with matching accessories. Mrs. Sims, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a dress of green crepe with green and brown accessories. Both had corsages of gold mums.

A reception was held in the church dining room immediately following the wedding ceremony. Bouquets of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and jade foliage were used as decorations. The bride's table decorated with yellow and white pompons was centered with a three tiered cake topped with a miniature bridal couple.

Miss Evelyn Brereton in a blue marquisette formal cut and served the cake. Miss Jean Hoard wearing a pink marquisette formal presided at the punch bowl. Miss Anna Lee Harvey and Miss Anita Parks, in taffeta formals of gold and green respectively, assisted in serving and were in charge of the guest book.

For traveling the bride chose a maroon suit with navy accessories which was complimented with a corsage of orchid cymbidums.

The bride is a graduate of Smith-Cotton High School and attended Central College, Fayette. She is employed in the Account and Credit Department of the Town and Country Shoe Factory.

The bridegroom, also a Smith-Cotton graduate, attended Missouri University and CMSC. He enlisted in the Army last summer and is now stationed at Ft. Riley, Kan., with the 25th Field Artillery Battalion.

Miss Deloris Jean Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Davis, 616 East 15th, became the bride of Mr. Russell Franklin Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. Farrie L. Cole Sr., Otterville, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Sunday, November 2, at the East Sedalia Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. P. Arnold before a chancel setting of floor baskets of various colored chrysanthemums, gladioli and greenery illuminated by the soft glow of candles in four seven branch candelabra entwined with huckleberry.

As the guests were being seated Miss Doris Mae Stott, organist, played a prelude of wedding music. During the ceremony she played "To a Wild Rose".

As the candles were being lighted by Mrs. Harry A. Mosby Jr., Kansas City, and Mrs. Lloyd G. Holman, Kansas City, sisters of the bride, Miss Stott accompanied the Rev. Farrie L. Cole Jr., Otterville, brother of the bridegroom, who sang "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life". The candlelighters wore two piece dresses of rose and aqua faille, respectively and corsages of yellow mums.

The Rev. Cole also sang "I Love You Truly" and at the close of the ceremony "The Lord's Prayer".

To the strains of "Because" the bride approached the altar on the arm of her father. She wore a light blue iridescent pure silk over taffeta street length dress styled with circular skirt. The tucked bodice featured a sweetheart neckline and elbow length sleeves which were deeply cuffed. Her navy blue hat was trimmed with tiny seed pearls and veiling. She wore a double strand of pearls, gift of the bridegroom, at her neck. She carried an arm bouquet of white chrysanthemums tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Eugene Vickrey of Jackson, was the bride's only attendant. She was attired in a maroon iridescent taffeta dress styled with rolled collar and V-shaped neckline. Her accessories were black and she carried an arm bouquet of lavender chrysanthemums tied with matching ribbon.

Mr. Donald Zumsteg, Otterville, served Mr. Cole as best man. Ushers were Mr. Wayne Davis, brother of the bride, Sedalia, Mr. Harry Mosby Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, Kansas City, Mr. Lloyd Holman, brother-in-law of the bride, Kansas City, and Mr. Joe Wallenburn, Otterville.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Davis chose to wear a two piece dress of navy blue faille with navy and white accessories. Her corsage was of red rosebuds. Mrs. Cole, mother of the bridegroom, wore a forest green suit with a beige and brown accessories and a shoulder corsage of talisman rosebuds.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the church basement for 275 guests. The bride's table was covered with a linen tablecloth, which the bridegroom brought home from Czechoslovakia when he was in the armed services. The four tiered cake topped with a bouquet of yellow roses was surrounded with rosebuds and greenery.

Fern Clevenger Becomes Bride Of R. Oelrichs

On Sunday, November 9, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Miss Fern Clevenger, 725 West Third, Sedalia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clevenger, Concordia, became the bride of Mr. Roland Oelrichs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Oelrichs, Mora, at the Blackwater Chapel Church in Sweet Springs.

The Rev. William Thomas, Sweet Springs, read the double ring ceremony before an altar setting of baskets of large white chrysanthemums and white pompons and lighted white tapers.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Paul Wylie, Sweet Springs, played a program of wedding music including, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "At Dawning." She accompanied Miss Florine Oelrichs of Sedalia, sister of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of gold satin, and Mr. Robert Oelrichs, Kansas City, brother of the bridegroom, who sang, "Because" and "I Love You Truly." Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" was used for the processional and Mendelsohn's "Wedding March" was used as the recessional.

As Mrs. Wylie played "Indian Love Call" the candles were lighted by Miss Elvera Oelrichs, sister of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of ice blue taffeta and net, fashioned with a fitted bodice featuring a wide scalloped neckline and a very full skirt of net over matching taffeta, and Miss Fern Oelrichs, cousin of the bridegroom, who wore a gown of yellow taffeta and net fashioned with a fitted bodice, wide neckline and a net yoke. The very full skirt of net was gathered over matching taffeta. Their wrist corsages were of pink carnations and they carried white candles

The bride chose for her wedding a gown of white bridal satin fashioned with a fitted bodice and a scalloped lace yoke. It was buttoned down the back with tiny satin covered buttons. Matching buttons were used on the long satin sleeves which came to a point over the wrists. The full satin skirt was gathered onto the bodice which scalloped at the waist. Her fingertip veil of white nylon net illusion was held in place by a small scalloped cap of satin and lace. She carried an arm bouquet of white carnations tied with white satin ribbon. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. John W. Hurd, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of pale green taffeta and net fashioned with a fitted bodice and a wide scalloped bertha which covered the shoulders and framed the wide neckline. The skirt of net over matching taffeta was gathered very full at the waist. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow pompon chrysanthemums tied with yellow satin ribbon.

Miss Carolyn Staats, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and wore a hoop - skirted gown of pale pink taffeta under matching pink net. She carried a large white chrysanthemum tied with white satin ribbon.

Mr. Allen Oelrichs, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of navy blue crepe with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a dress of gray crepe with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was held at the home of the bride's parents in Concordia. The bridal table was covered with a crocheted tablecloth. In the center was the three - tiered wedding cake, decorated with pink rosebuds and a miniature bride and bridegroom and encircled with greenery and white pompon chrysanthemums.

For traveling the bride chose a gray faille dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Texas.

Sooners Crumble Missouri's Dream With 47-7 Lacing

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 15 (AP) — Oklahoma chopped up Missouri's hopes for the Big Seven Conference football crown today, mixing together wide-awake defensive play with a driving ground game for a 47-7 decision.

Missouri, a two-touchdown underdog, was out to unseat Oklahoma from its Big Seven dominance but the Sooners drove to two easy touchdowns in the first quarter and were never in danger.

Oklahoma can win its fifth straight title by beating Nebraska next Saturday.

Missouri's Tigers resorted to passing off the spread formation in an effort to overtake the nation's leading rushing and scoring team, but only once did it pay off.

Meanwhile, Oklahoma intercepted seven Missouri passes and turned them into three. TDs. Merril Green made three touchdowns for Oklahoma while Eddie Crowder, Jack Ging, Buck McPhail and Jack Van Pool each chipped in one.

Missouri was able to open up only once, scoring its lone touchdown halfway through the second quarter when Jim Hook took command of the Tigers and passed and ran his team 61 yards in nine plays. He cashed in from the one yard line and Paul Fuchs converted.

The remainder of the time Oklahoma, snapping back from a 27-21 defeat at the hands of Notre Dame, couldn't be held.

Sooners Average 40 A Game

It rushed 261 yards to approach its average of 297.7 yards per game which made it first in the nation last week. And the 47 points gives the Sooners a season average of 40 a game, another national first.

Forty-four thousand partisan spectators came to see Oklahoma, the No. 8 team in the nation last week, take its 34th straight Big Seven game without a defeat, and they didn't have to wait long for action.

With less than five minutes gone, Sam Allen blocked a Missouri punt on the Tiger 49 and Don Brown picked up the ball and scooted to the five. Four plays later, Crowder scored from the one and McPhail converted, his first of five.

Less than two minutes later, Ging took a punt and evaded the entire Missouri defense for 65 yards and the second Sooner TD.

Bad Center Pass Hurts MU

Oklahoma jumped into a 21-0 lead with four minutes gone in the second quarter. A bad pass caught Missouri punter Bill Fessler off guard and he was able to get the ball away but still lost 5 yards to his own 30 despite the kick. It took Oklahoma seven plays to move to the double-stripe with Green crossing over from the three.

Missouri then scored and the half ended 21-7.

With 11 minutes gone in the third period, McPhail broke over right tackle eight yards to score after a drive of 57 yards on 11 plays.

Tom Catlin, Oklahoma's defensive linebacker, intercepted a Missouri pass a minute and a half later on Missouri's 40 and returned it nine yards to the 31. Three plays later, Billy Vessels pegged 17 yards to Green for a touchdown.

Jerry Ingram intercepted Hook's pass and returned it seven yards to the Missouri 39 to set up the final touchdown for Oklahoma's substitutes eight plays later. Van Pool on a keeper went over from the one.

Santee Leads Kansas To Cross Country Title

LAWRENCE, Kan. Nov. 15 (AP)—The Kansas Jayhawkers, paced by Wes Santee, today won their sixth successive Big Seven Conference cross country championship.

Kansas won with the low score of 20½ points. Santee ran the hill and Dale three miles in 15 minutes, 8.1 seconds.

Oklahoma was second with 34 points, followed by Colorado with 43, Missouri with 66½, Iowa State 69, and Nebraska 92.

Kansas State was not entered.

Santee broke the tape 100 yards ahead of Bruce Drommond of Oklahoma.

Wichita Trounces Bulldogs, 41-14

DES MOINES, Nov. 15 (AP)—Wichita rolled up a 20-7 halftime lead over Drake then scored three more times in the third period to trounce the Bulldogs 41-14 here today. Drake scored its final touchdown with six minutes remaining in the game.

Smith-Cotton Cage Season Starts Nov. 21

Smith-Cotton High School Tigers are whipping into shape for the 1952-53 basketball season with the first game only five days away. The Tigers open the season on the Smith-Cotton court, Friday night, meeting Windsor.

Coach Howard Glavin is well pleased with the turn in of practice the past two weeks by the Varsity squad. However, he reports the team will be small, with a great attitude to win. The boys have been working hard, showing plenty of hustle, getup, and anxious for the season to get underway.

The Varsity has three Seniors back in Bob Shepard, James Schneck and Bob Hieronymus. The remainder of the group are Sophomores and Juniors.

So much interest has been shown in basketball this season that the boys have been divided into three gruops with Coach Forrest Arnall taking the Eighth Grade boys; Coach Bob Edmondson coaching the Freshman and Sophomores and Coach Glavin the older group.

Trojans Smother Heinrich To Rip Washington, 33-0

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15 (AP)—Unbeaten Southern California drove through rain, mud and the University of Washington football team today for a 33-0 victory to set the stage for next week's Rose Bowl—deciding battle in the Coast Conference with undefeated UCLA.

Held to a 7-0 lead for two quarters by a surprisingly stubborn foe from the Pacific Northwest, the Trojans broke loose for two touchdowns in the third period and two more in the final quarter to turn the contest into a rout.

Enroute to their eighth triumph of the season, the Trojans handed the Huskies' All-America quarterback candidate, Don Heinrich, the worst afternoon he's experienced since UCLA wrecked Washington earlier in the season, 32-7.

Heinrich, the nation's leading passer who was playing perhaps his final college game before going into the Army, had five passes intercepted—two for touchdowns—and completed only two throws out of 18 tries. They gained only 14 yards.

It was the first time Washington had been shut out in 44 games, dating back to 1949, and was a sad farewell for the Huskies' 1950 All-America star.

Kozar Leads Tennessee To Win Over Florida

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 15 (AP)—Andy Kozar, a Pennsylvania coal miner's son who doctors once said would never be able to play football, ripped Florida's line to shreds today to lead Cotton Bowl-bound today to a 26-12 homecoming victory.

The 210-pound senior fullback from St. Michael, Pa., scored twice and reeled off 111 yards in 16 rushes before he was carted off to the hospital early in the third quarter with an injury. It was announced after the game that he was not hurt seriously.

Kozar was stricken with spinal meningitis in 1945 and after a 31-day seige with the dread disease, doctors told him to forget about football. But he was determined to play an today he had one of the greatest day of his star-studded career.

Hong Kong has been the West's trade gateway to South China for about a century.

SMU Spots Arkansas 17 Points Then Pulls Game Out Of The Fire

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 15—(AP)—Sam Stolenwerck, a half-pint back, who had done virtually nothing for Southern Methodist but kick extra points, herded the Mustangs to a comeback victory over Arkansas today, 27-17.

The one-man show before an Arkansas homecoming turnout of 20,000 retained for SMU a mathematical chance to tie Texas for the Southwest Conference football championship.

Stollenwerck entered the game as SMU's third tailback and with the handicap of a 17-point defict early in the second quarter. He got the Mustangs ahead for 209 yards and three touchdowns. He also made three of four conversions. Before today, he had tried only 10 aerials all season, completing three.

Arkansas used an alert, hard-hitting defense to rack up all its points in the first 17 minutes.

Texas Tops TCU On Blocked Kick, Intercepted Pass

FT. WORTH, Tex., Nov. 15 (AP)—A partially blocked punt and an intercepted pass set up two Texas touchdowns in the last period and hammering Billy Quinn and blasting Dick Ochoa pushed the Longhorns to a 14-7 victory over Texas Christian and the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

A crowd of 32,000 roared as the Longhorns, thwarted at every turn by intercepted passes and fumbles, finally pulled themselves together for the victory that kept them undefeated in the Southwest Conference race and clinched a place in the Cotton Bowl against Tennessee New Year's Day.

Ray McKown, the passing running, punting star of the Christians, had kept TCU ahead going into the final period. But ironically, it was the partial block of one of his kicks that gave Texas its first chance at a touchdown.

Quinn, the swirling, smashing sophomore halfback, scored both of the Texas touchdowns, one on a 16-yard blast over guard, the other on a pitchout around left end for the six yards.

Gib Dawson, another of the great running Texas backs, kicked both extra points—making his 12 conversions in a row.

The Texas Christian score came on a pass from McKown to Glen Jones for 10 yards deep in the first period.

Olympic Kings Enter Sugar Bowl's Meet

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 15 —(AP)—Irwin Poche, president of the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association, announced today that many Olympic stars, including four champions, will appear in the Sugar Bowl outdoor track and field meet in New Orleans on Sunday, Dec. 28.

Poche said champions who have accepted are Bob Richards, pole vault; Cy Young, javelin; Walter Davis, high jump, and Parry O'Brien, shot put.

Sugar Bowl Track Chairman L. De Benedetto who extended the invitations, said Bob Mathias, Olympic and U. S. decathlon champion, is another possibility.

Another star who has accepted an invitation is Jack Davis, Southern California hurdler, NCAA champion, and second in a record-smashing Olympic 110 meter hurdles finals.

Also slated to perform in the meet are Robert McMillen, Occidental College one-miler, who was one of the sensations in the Helsinki games, and Darrow Hooper, Texas A. & M. College football player and Southwest Conference shotput record holder at 54 feet 7 3-4 inches.

In addition, there will be five competitive events — 100-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, 880-yard run, one mile run and one mile relay.

Sports Scraps

(By D. Kelly Scruton)

SMITH-COTTON Tigers will open their 1952-'53 basketball season on Friday night, Nov. 21, when they meet the Windsor High School quintet on the Smith-Cotton court. This is an annual opening game for the Tigers, meeting Windsor, and always provides some exciting moments.

Coach Howard Glavin in discussing his Varsity squad said he has a group of boys who are hard workers, anxious to win, and are putting everything they have in their practice sessions. His team will be small, but their ambition to win may overshadow a large team. They are fast and aggressive on the floor, and this may carry the team through a lot of wins this season.

The Tigers have seven games to be played in this half of the season. Starting with Windsor they play: Kemper, Marshall, Warrensburg College High, Jefferson City and Eldon away from Sedalia, and Hannibal here.

The Tigers have been entered in the Clinton tournament starting Feb. 6.

MISSOURI is still far from being classified as not being subject to fires. The hazard still is in existance with Missouri's woods and fields still tinder dry in various sections with little relief in sight. The rain which fell a little more than a week ago gave a brief breathing spell but warm days all week have put the state back to where it was before in a fire hazard condition.

Farmers are still insisting that hunters stay off of their property, that is the majority of the farmers who have posted their lands. I would suggest that hunters obey these signs, you have no right to trespass and can be prosecuted for doing so.

Too many farmers have had fire damage the past fek weeks and they are not welcoming hunters until a good drenching rain has fallen, one which will take the danger away from their farm lands.

YOU hunters who insist on hunting and trespassing are just forcing the farmer to take other methods to keep you away from their farms in future seasons. One farm owner has suggested that if the continued trespassing does not stop that a mass-meeting be called at the Court House and a plan to stop such practices be discussed

What the plan is, I don't know, but if any more cattle are killed by these trespassing, careless hunters, I can imagine it might be a shotgun loaded with bacon rind and salt. It doesn't feel too well when you became the target of one of those shots. Tearing down or shooting down "No Trespassing" signs is an offense for which you can be prosecuted.

If you insist and get caught, don't come crying around about keeping your name out of the paper. I would suggest some glaring headlines, if you desire to violate the law.

Branby Sparks Late Recovery As Colorado Whips K-State

BOULDER, Colo., Nov. 15 (AP)—Don Branby, a fiery defensive end all season, switched over to the offensive today and delivered the spark that sent Colorado winging to a 34-14 victory over Kansas State after the Kansans had taken a 14-0 lead at the start.

Heavily favored Colorado's offensive attack mis-fired for the first 20 minutes during which Kansas State counted on Veryl Switzer's 63 yard punt return and a 73-yard sustained march.

Branby, 195 pound senior from Glenwood, Minn., was sent in to play with the offensive unit in the second quarter. His inspired play sent the Buffaloes rolling for two touchdowns in the last two and a half minutes of the half. In the third quarter, Branby recovered a fumble to set up one score.

Colorado scored twice in the third quarter on a 55-yard march and on a seven yard drive resulting from end Carl Fisher's recovery of a K-State fumble on the seven.

The Buffaloes added a fifth touchdown in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter with a 31-yard scoring march.

Buffs Miss One Chance

Colorado muffed a scoring chance in the first two minutes when Branby blocked a Kansas State punt and end Alabama Glass recovered on the Kansas 14. Halfback Ronnie Johnson ran for a touchdown but the play was nullified by a penalty.

Colorado gave up the ball after being pushed back to the 27. From there Kansas State drove 73 yards for a touchdown in nine plays. Fullback Carvel Oldham scampered 38 yards around right end to the Colorado 35 for the big gain. Oldham fumbled on the three but halfback Bernie Dudley scooped up the ball and romped across for the touchdown.

With nine minutes gone in the second quarter, Switzer took a Colorado punt on his 37 and toedanced down the sideline on a 63-yard touchdown run.

Only two and a half minutes were left in the first half before Colorado's sputtering offensive ground out two touchdowns. Starting from the Kansas State 47, where a punt rolled out of bounds, Colorado pounded for a touchdown in eight plays. Fullback Ralph Curtis broke through right guard and rambled 16 yards for the score.

State Fumble Sets-up TD

Colorado guard Bob Klamman recovered Carl Albacker's fumble on Kansas State's 25 to set up the second Buffalo score. On the second play, quarterback Roger Williams lateraled to halfback Carroll Hardy who scooted 17 yards to the Wildcats' three. Hardy plunged across on the next play but Ed Stahura blocked William's attempted place kick.

The Buffaloes rolled easily to their two touchdowns in the third quarter. Taking the ball on their 45, Colorado drove for a touchdown in nine plays. Woody Shelton scored on a reverse from the four. Fisher's recovery of Oldham's fumble on the Kansas seven set up the second counter.

After penalties set Colorado back to the 21, they completed two passes and ran eight yards to put the ball on the one. Fullback Bill Horton crashed over from there.

Brandy Drivers Stay Sober

NEW YORK (AP)—The 12 drivers of trucks carrying brandy for a German concern apparently are not tempted by their cargo because all recently received awards for sober and careful driving, it has been reported here.

The trucks carry 10,000 gallons of 8-year-old German Uralt brandy made by the Asbach & Co., of Rudesheim-on-Rhine near Wiesbaden. The awards were made by Germany's equivalent of America's National Safety Council created to encourage accident prevention.

Fumbles Costly To Irish

Seven Bobbles Give Numerous Chances To Michigan State Who Triumphs, 21-3

EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 15 (AP)— An unexpected offensive weapon, the Notre Dame fumble, gave Mich. State Capt. Don McAuliffe—once a freshman at Notre Dame—a chance to score the two touchdowns that were the meat of Michigan State's 21-3 victory over the Irish here today.

Michigan State recovered seven Notre Dame fumbles during the defensive thriller watched by a record crowd of 52,472 in Macklin Stadium. Five times the Spartans muffed scoring chances but the law of averages gave them the two touchdowns needed to keep them unbeaten in 23 games.

Notre Dame's field goal also was set up by a fumble—for a change by Michigan State.

The Irish bobbled the ball three times in the first half but Michigan State couldn't make its scoring magic work and the game was a goose-egg tie at intermission.

Michian State recovered four Irish fumbles in the third quarter, for most of the scoring was concentrated, and scored twice.

Heap Bobbles on 14

Dick Tamburo recovered when Joe Heap dropped the ball to put MSC in position for the first score. Michigan State took over on the Notre Dame 14 yards line, worked the ball down to the nine, was helped to the one by a penalty and then McAuliffe went over through left guard.

Hank Bullough grabbed the second important fumble, by Francis Baterra, on the Notre Dame 21. After four plunges put Michigan State down to the Irish five, a penalty gave an assist to the one yard line and McAuliffe was able to throw himself over again.

McAuliffe, now 25 and a senior, was at Notre Dame for four months as a freshman in 1946. After a Navy hitch he was briefly at the Naval Acamedy but then transferred to Michigan State.

Defenseman Jimmy Ellis intercepted a pass by Ralph Guglieml and sprinted to the Notre Dame 25 to set the stage for the final score. Fullback Evan Slonac, who had a perfect day with his extra point tries, raced around end for the score.

Arrix Boots Field Goal

Billy Wells fumbled for Michigan State as the second half opened and John Lattner recovered. Notre Dame got down as far as the Michigan State six but had to try for a fourth down field goal. Sophomore Bob Arrix split the goal posts to put Notre Dame briefly in the lead by 3-0.

Huskers Fail To Put Reins On Paul Geil

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 15 (AP)—Smart and rugged Paul Giel tossed a 74-yard scoring pass and ran and passed to 57 yards of a 60-yard drive to the goal line here today as Minnesota defeated Nebraska 13 to 7 in a Big Seven-Big Ten inter-conference football game.

A Nebraska homecoming crowd of nearly 40,000 gasped as Giel threw the ball nearly 50 yards in the second quarter to end Tom Soltau, who was in the clear at about the Nebraska 35 and ran over.

When Gene Cappelletti converted, it knotted the score at 7 to 7 where it stood at the half.

In the third quarter, Giel, a pressure player of top grade today, ran for 33 yards and passed for 24 yards as the Big Ten team went into the lead. In the drive from the Minnesota 40 to the Nebraska 5, key plays were Giel's pass to Soltau for 16 yards, a toss to Don Swanson for 7 yards, and Giel's 15-yard sprint to the 5. Fullback John Baumgartner then drove the ball to the 2-yard line on two plunges.

Giel Runs With Power

Here Giel returned to work. His first smash at the Nebraska line failed to gain. He tried again and this time crashed over, knocking a couple of Nebraskans into the end zone with him.

Oddly, it was Giel's fumble that started Nebraska to the first touchdown of the game, scored on a 65-yard drive.

Giel's fumble was gobbled up by Chuck Chamley on the Nebraska 35 and the Huskers ran to the Minnesota one, key plays being a 27-yard sprint by John Bordogna and a 14-yard dash by Dennis Korinek.

From the one, Nebraska was penalized to the six. From there, Ray Novak smashed to the two and then Bob Reynolds ran wide, cut in and went over. Reynolds' kick made it 7 to 0.

Minnesota entered the fourth quarter with a pass interception by Laurence Schmitt on his own 25. He ran back to the Minnesota 44, then attempted a lateral which went astray and Nebraska gained the ball.

Gopher Defense Too Tough

For the rest of the quarter, play was in Minnesota territory, but the Minnesota defense was equal to anything Nebraska could throw at it.

Once the Huskers went to the Minnesota 15 before surrendering the ball, and again to the 23. Another march was stopped on the Minnesota 27 when Reynolds fumbled after picking up five yards and Stavros Canakes recovered the ball.

Giel completed five out of 14 passes for 152 yards and carried the ball 24 times for a net of 86 yards.

Gremlins Stage Game Rally To Dump Hughesville, 56-48

Sacred Heart's resurging Gremlins put on a spirited closing rally Friday night to pound-out a 56-48 basketball victory over the Hughesville Wildcats in a well-played crowd pleaser before 300 fans at Sacred Heart gymnasium.

Great clutch performances by Dick Stohr and Jim Fall iced the triumph after the visitors had knotted the count with only two minutes left, at 48-all. This pair scored all the points in the red-hot final windup.

For Fall it was another great night of basketball. The little southpaw poured in 20 points during the evening to lead both teams in the scoring column. Stohr, too, turned in his usual capable contest—but the big surprise was the brilliant all-around playing of John Seifner, who dogged Fall in scoring with 17 counters and contributed greatly toward protecting the Gremlin lead during the first three quarters.

But the red-and-white didn't have all the stars. Dick Kerrick flipped-in 15 for Hughesville and nearly broke the Gremlin's back with his deadly long shooting during the middle periods, and Parkhurst sparked the final Wildcat rally which fell just short.

Sedalia jumped into the lead in the first quarter and held it thru most of the tilt. The winners led by five at the end of the first, were tied twice but emerged with a one-point margin at the half, and built the advantage to four points going into the final canto.

It was a different story in the close B-team cage contest and in the girls volleyball game—the visitors won both, the basketball game by a 25-22 score and the net game by a 13-12 margin.

High scorers in the basketball game were Ramsey of Hughesville with 13 and McKee of the Junior Gremlins with eight. In the volleyball game A. Moon scored six for the visitors, and Ropp spiked home five for Sedalia.

The next basketball activity for the Gremlins will be the Warsaw Tournament which opens Wednesday.

Houston Bottles-Up Baylor To Win, 28-6

HOUSTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Halfback Ken Pridgeon scored two touchdowns and setup a third with his running and passing today as Houston throttled Baylor's high powered offense for a 28 to 6 upset over the Southwest Conference team.

Pridgeon, 180-pound senior from Bryan, Tex., scored twice from the 8-year-line and tossed a 37-yard pass to halfback S. M. Meeks to move the Cougars to the Baylor 14 in a drive that netted the final Houston tally.

The powerful Houston defense, ninth ranked in the nation, meanwhile was permitting Baylor to pass midfield only three times.

Ole Miss Accepts Sugar Bowl's Bid

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 15 (AP)—The University of Mississippi's team climaxed its stunning upset victory over unbeaten Maryland today by accepting a bid to meet unbeaten Georgia Tech in the Sugar Bowl football game here New Years Day.

Kansas Edges Sooner Aggies By 12-7 Count

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 15 (AP)—The Kansas Jayhawkers turned their only sustained drive into a fourth quarter touchdown for a seriously contested 12-7 victory over the Oklahoma A and M Cowboys in a non-conference football game before 15,000 shirt-sleeved fans here today.

It was Kansas' seventh victory against two losses and their seventh successive win over Oklahoma Aggies.

As in Kansas' early season victories it was a matter of lion-hearted defensive play that meant the difference between success and disaster.

The Jayhawks defensive corps, which stopped Oklahoma A and M threats on the six and nine yard lines in the first half, responded to a game saving stop on the one-yard line after Kansas had gotten ahead 12-7.

Kansas got its first touchdown with the game four minutes old after recovering a fumble on the Cowboys' 29-yard line. Gil Reich, the Jayhawks fine double-duty player, whipped around left end 10 yards for the score.

The aroused Cowboys promptly marched 71 yards in seven plays to tie the score on quarterback Don Baber's 17-yard pass to end John Weigle. And until the Kansans started their winning drive that paid off in the last period it appeared the Cowboys had an upset in the making.

Oklahoma A and M blocked Don Hess' conversion attempt, but Bennie Davis was successful in making his conversion and the Aggies led 7 to 6 through the third quarter.

Playing without the services of halfback Charley Hoag for the second straight week, Kansas lacked offensive punch, moving the ball on drives into Oklahoma A and M territory only twice all afternoon.

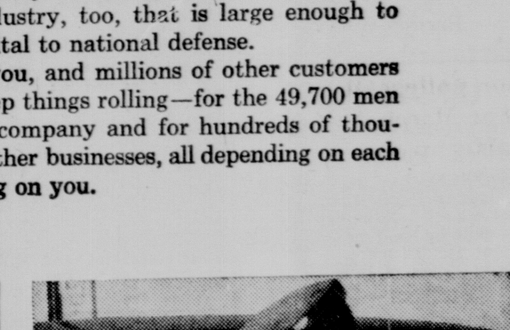
WE DEPEND ON McGowan Sign Company in St. Louis, Missouri, and other small businesses in many places. Here Joseph McGowan reproduces Standard Oil's familiar Torch and Oval sign for a special display. Services such as this help our 49,700 employees to produce and market the products necessary to keep millions of Americans rolling.

WE DEPEND ON men like Theodore W. Petersen, a container company expert, for help in solving packaging problems at our refineries. Glenn H. Whetzell (left) of Standard Oil is shown consulting with Mr. Petersen. The experience and skills of thousands of other business firms are brought to bear on problems we meet in serving you better.



WE DEPEND ON John H. Scott, first helper on a huge open-hearth steel furnace at Gary. Scores of steel firms furnish us with items ranging from the smallest rivets to parts for giant catalytic crackers. The investment of our 120,000 stockholders helps make it possible for us to buy such equipment, so we, in turn, can provide you with ever better petroleum products.

LOOK WHAT YOU START WHEN YOU START YOUR CAR

You have your Standard Oil dealer "fill 'er up." You get your change—and a friendly "thank you." You turn your ignition key and start rolling on your way.

And here's what you start rolling on our side of the pump—thousands of separate businesses working to supply your needs . . . businesses on which Standard Oil and its subsidiary companies depend in serving you.

From oil well to service station, we depend on others . . . on 32,000 suppliers who make everything from our red tank trucks to the rubber bands for office use.

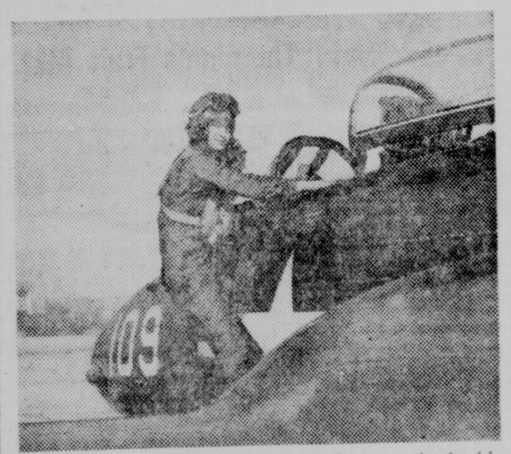
Large and small, they help us make and market more than 2,000 petroleum products for your greater convenience and comfort.

Thousands of other companies use our products for your convenience and comfort, too. Railroads, airlines, busses get you there with our help. Your nylon clothing, television set, electric light, the hot water and heat in your building may depend on petroleum we have supplied.

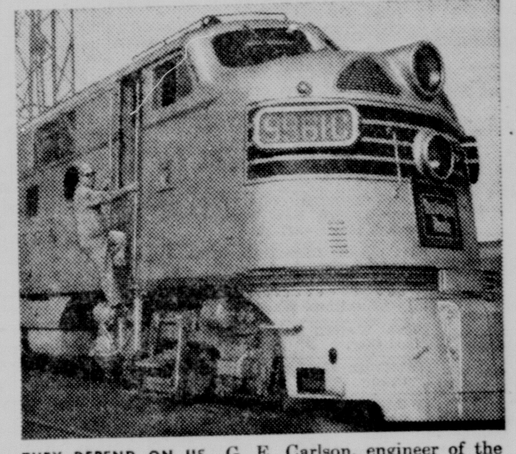
Satisfying the steadily increasing everyday demand for oil has built an industry, too, that is large enough to provide the oil so vital to national defense.

So you see how you, and millions of other customers of Standard Oil, keep things rolling—for the 49,700 men and women of our company and for hundreds of thousands of people in other businesses, all depending on each other—all depending on you.

Standard Oil Company



THEY DEPEND ON US. Lt. Robert Lawson checks his Banshee fighter before take-off at the U. S. Naval Air Station, Glenview, Illinois, where pilots are recruited for the Naval Aviation Cadet Program. Of value to the entire air might of the United States is the development by Standard Oil and other oil companies of a super-quality aviation fuel previously unknown.



THEY DEPEND ON US. G. E. Carlson, engineer of the Burlington Railroad's California Zephyr, climbs into his cab. This three-unit diesel locomotive uses 3,620 gallons of fuel on the 1,038-mile Chicago-Denver run. To meet ever-growing needs for petroleum products, Standard Oil has plowed back two-thirds of its profits in recent years for expanded facilities.

THEY DEPEND ON US. Dealer Richard F. Almer of Cloquet, Minnesota, services the car of Frank L. Redfield. Mr. Almer and thousands of other independent businessmen rely on us for quality products. They count on building their businesses through personalized service and through Standard Oil's constant improvement of reasonably priced products.

Estimate 180 Pettis Countians Have Diabetes

Approximately 5,000 residents of Pettis County will be tested for diabetes as part of the Diabetes Detection Drive, Nov. 17-22, it was announced today by Dr. Gordon Stauffacher.

The Pettis County Medical Society, with the help of the local registered nurses, is cooperating with the American Diabetes Association in an intensive drive to find an estimated 1,000,000 persons in this country who have diabetes without knowing it.

Pettis County has about 180 unknown diabetics, Dr. Stauffacher estimated, based upon national averages of the ailment's incidence. He said these persons are in danger if their condition is not found and placed under control.

Diabetes is the only chronic disease for which there is a known control and, according to Dr. Stauffacher, the ease of control may depend upon how early the condition is detected and placed under treatment. For this reason he urged every adult and child in Pettis County to take advantage of the testing facilities available during Diabetes Week, or to arrange for a test with his family doctor.

Untreated diabetes, Dr. Stauffacher explained, gets progressively worse and usually ends fatally. Once found and controlled, the disease seldom interferes with normal life and activity.

St. Therese Study Club Meets at Arnold Home

St. Therese Study Club held its fourth session of the season at the home of Mrs. Willis Arnold, 1007 South Vermont, Thursday afternoon with nine members present.

This is one of the 800 discussion clubs enrolling over 7,000 members in the diocese of Kansas City, which each year meet in 16 sessions to discuss a recently published book chosen by Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara. This year's text is "The Life of Christ in the Gospels".

A dozen or more of these groups, with approximately 100 members, are from Sedalia's Sacred Heart Parish, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Daniel G. Drew, who fits any interested person, Catholic or non-Catholic, into either an already organized group or helps them organize a group of their own. There are other groups meeting in St. Patrick's and St. Joseph's parishes.

At the meeting, the hostess showed the artistic home altar her son, Willis Arnold Jr., constructed before he entered service, and the hand carved statue of a chanting monk which he sent home from Nascelle, Wash., where he is now stationed.

Mrs. J. P. Bernard read a letter from the director of Father Flannigan's Boys Home acknowlding the Study Club's request that memorial masses be offered there for the recently deceased husband of one of the members, Mrs. Phil Gudorp.

Miss Mary Helen Meyer read a letter from Arthur Stabile, the 22 year old founder and director of a new group of Lay Apostles, called "Campaigners for Christ the King" with headquarters in New York City. And as a sample of how small the world is: Louis Barsch, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Barsch, 1406 South Harrison, who is stationed at Camp Pickett, Va., wrote a letter in September about becoming personally acquainted with the remarkable young man, Arthur Stabile, founder of the unique organization.

After the refreshments were served, a game was played with prizes going to Miss Mary Helen Mayer, Mrs. Maud Karrigan and Mrs. Gudorp.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, Nov. 19, at the home of Mrs. William Schlaffer, 232 South Quincy.

Friendship Class Takes Melita Day Nursery a Treat

The children at the Melita Day Nursery had a treat Thursday and so did the members of the Friendship Class of the Fifth Street Methodist Church.

The members of the class took ice cream and cookies and went to the nursery—and that was the treat the children had—but many of the women had never been to the nursery before — and seeing children was a treat to them.

The little folks were all washed and combed — waiting for the treat—and it is not an easy task to keep that many children looking so nice and clean until they can be served. But they were entertained with records and stories until the women came in. Then the ice cream and cookies were served. Before that, as the women looked on, they folded their hands for blessing and at the end they all came in loudly on the "Amen."

Mrs. Lucy Rabourn, superintendent, who is a member of the class, took the women through the nursery and they were delighted with what they saw — and they are going to remember for a long time all of those bright little faces as the youngsters waited for the treat.

Club Will Install Telephone At School

High Point Homemakers Club met at the home of Mrs. Frank Eck with Mrs. Dick Jenkins assisting.

Thirteen members and one guest were present. Following the covered dish luncheon, the president, Mrs. Kenneth Anderson, gave a report on the club's achievement day exhibit, illustrating the seven basic foods.

The club decided to have a telephone installed at High Point School. Plans were made for the Christmas party. A committee was appointed to make up candy bags for the children. There will also be a gift exchange.

The Homemakers will serve refreshments at the next 4-H club meeting.

After the business session a book review on North American Birds was given by Mrs. Alfred Stoffel. The remainder of the afternoon was spent socially.

The Christmas meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Henry Lamm.

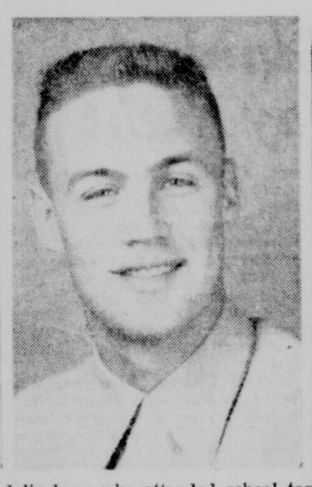
Returns to Maryland Home

Mrs. Charles A. Machen has returned to her home in Baltimore, Md., after a delightful visit with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Chadwick, and her nephew and niece, Dr. and Mrs. F. O. Murphy, 1001 East Fourth. Her husband was the late Capt. Charles A. Machen. Enroute home Mrs. Machen reported snow in West Virginia, but upon her arrival in Baltimore she found the weather much the same as here in Sedalia, according to telephone conversation from Baltimore.



STILL TOGETHER: Three Sedalia boys who attended school together, were all graduated from Smith-Cotton High School in May 1952, and enlisted in the Navy together on Oct. 16, are still together in boot training in San Diego, Calif. Even when they are in their bunks they are close enough to touch each other, one boy has one of his buddies in the bunk above him and the other one in the bunk right next to his. The boys are Wilbur R. Bain, left, son of Mrs. Peggy Ruby and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Case, 1205 South Osage; center, Bobbie Joe England, son of Mrs. Mary Hooper, 1118 East Tenth and Billy Ross Dey, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dey, 423 East Fourteenth.

Notes from Public Library—

National Book Week Starts Today; Library Has Exhibit

With the third week of November all over the country, After World comes another very special celebration — that of National Book Week.

During this time (Nov. 16-22) the library will have on exhibit several new books for children. The appeal and the beauty of each of these will show why children's books no longer are mere geography lessons or moral tales in disguise. They will illustrate why the demands of children have changed, and how they have resulted in books with vitality, honesty, and imagination.

Of course, the subject matter may be varied as possible, ranging from the practical to the fantastic, but as long as the author presents his book in an honest manner, he has won his way into the hearts of the children.

This must have been what Franklin K. Mathiews, the chief librarian for the Boy Scouts, had foreseen when, in 1915, he began his campaign for better quality and sufficient quantity of reading for boys all over the country. After World War I, he secured the co-operation of Mr. Melcher of the American Booksellers Association in compiling a list "The Bookshelf for Boys and Girls." In 1919, after the meeting of this Association and the Children's session of the American Library Association, National Book Week was well on its way.

Slogans were devised, posters prepared, and schools as well as libraries became intensely interested. Children became acquainted with some of our friends — Robinson Crusoe, Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer. Children still are making good friends with our old friends, and will want to keep them as friends while they are meeting new ones in newer books — be they imaginary, heroes, heroines, or animals and pets.

To find that "Reading is Fun" is a great American heritage — let us do what we can to encourage it, for, upon it, a great deal of Democracy as we know it, is founded.

Teletype Speeds Production For Three T&C Nearby Plants

Sitting at a typewriter at her office in the Town and Country shoe factory here in Sedalia, Miss Doris Mae Stott, production supervisor, gives her orders to the plants at Warrensburg and Odessa simultaneously and instantaneously.

Actually the machine Miss Stott uses is not a typewriter, but a teletype—which is attached to the telephone line. As she types the orders and inter-communication messages between the three plants they are immediately typed on similar machines in the plants at Odessa and Warrensburg. Replies can be made in the same way.

It is a new machine for T&C and it speeds up production all along the line. As supervisor of production in all three plants, Miss Stott must know at all times just how the various orders are moving through the factories.

Getting the information on the Sedalia plant is simple. She's right there. But getting the data from Warrensburg and Odessa used to take longer. It required many long distance calls during the day, and the usual waiting period for the calls to be put through.

Miss Doris Mae Stott is shown at the teletype machine in her office at Town and Country in Sedalia.

Now there is no delay. With the teletype, she can write her messages to either plant and have them there just as fast as she can type. From the other end of the line she can get her replies just as speedily.

Besides the production orders, requests for information and materials ar relayed by the teletype machine and the T&C operations go forward more smoothly.

Girl Scout News—

Hospital Patient Says Thanks To Brownies for Tray Favor

Brownies enjoy receiving unexpected gifts just as they love to give them.

Brownie Troop 52 of Washington School was very pleased with a letter from Oscar H. Fajen of Cole Camp thanking the troop for the Hallowe'en tray favor made by them that he received on his tray while a patient in Bothwell Hospital. Besides the "Thank You", they also received a contribution for their treasury. And since this is a new troop, contributions are well received. Mrs. John R. Lyle is the leader.

Deliver Cookies In December

National Staffer Coming

Troop To Church

Stories are still coming into the office of the way different troops celebrated Girl Scout Week. Troop 69 of Jefferson school attended the East Sedalia Baptist Church on Girl Scout Sunday and later in the week entertained themselves with a party, with prizes for the best Hallowe'en costume. Mrs. Lindsay Hayden, Mrs. Robert Fisher and Mrs. Paul Sparks are the leaders.

Troop 34, with Mrs. Jett as leader, also attended church on Go-To-Church-Sunday and were given a party by Mrs. S. O. Oehrke. Mrs. Ben Smith, 1213 East Fifth, was invited to the party, but could not go, so the Brownies went to her home, took her refreshments and sang for her.

L. I. Patricks, on Route 2---

They Wanted to Raise Rabbits, Soon Found Themselves In Business

Producing Angora Wool and Rabbit Meat Proves Big Chore Even Tho They're Cute

The big pink eyes of the mother rabbits followed every movement of the stranger — their long ears, with the pink linings, stood up very straight and the little noses wiggled. They do not welcome the visits of strangers.

A half dozen wire cages in a newly built shed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Patrick, route 2, Sedalia, house the white angora mothers and their cunning babies that still snuggle in the soft nests built in the wooden boxes with a round hole for a door.

The mother prepares for her babies before hand — starting under her neck she pulls the long silky fur from her body and puts it in the box. Day by day she builds the nest until by the time the babies are born the underneath part of her body is practically without fur. She works the hay and straw to make the nest just so and fills it with the fur. The new born babies have no fur at all so she wraps them tightly in the fur from her own body that she has placed in the nest, tucks them in securely and puts straw and hay in front of the opening to keep them safe.

There are usually about eight or 12 babies at a time but the mother rabbit does not raise them all — she does exceedingly well if she ever raises eight. Sometimes she kills them herself — but not intentionally. She gets excited and stomps with her hind feet and when the babies are tiny they are sometimes stomped to death.

They are cute when they nurse—they lie on their backs with their feet up in the air — and when they are about two weeks old they get their eyes open and wander out into the pen. The first thing they do is make for the food bowl — eating is a natural for them — they can't think of anything they can do better. They like the pellets mama eats and just stuff themselves — in fact they eat almost as much as mama.

By this time they are nicely coated with a covering of fine white hair. One little fellow noticed a bowl of water and thought he would take a drink — boy, it tasted good. The bowl was a little high for him and the water about half way down on the inside so he had to get half way down on the inside, too. It was sorto awkward—he would have liked to have had a straw but the only straw he saw around was the wrong kind — so he balanced himself over the edge of the bowl and drank — then he rested a minute and went back again — in fact the third time — it just seemed he couldn't get enough of that nice cool water.

Mrs. Patrick says that she fills the bowls for the rabbits at least twice a day during the hot weather — they like water. They like hay and straw and the pellets she buys for them but they can only have so much food a day — she measures it out — any more makes them sick.

The little fellows are really cute at about six weeks old. They look and hop just about like the mechanical bunnies or those operated with a rubber bulb found in the toy stores at Easter. They like to be petted, too, just like a dog or cat, and no matter how big they get they never get over it — they love to have someone rub their long ears and their heads.

When they are three months old they begin to grow the long angora fur which is used to make the wool for the wooly little angora sweaters the young girls love so much and the fuzzy little angora caps.

The fur grows from three to seven inches long and is sheared every three months. A pound of wool sells for about eight dollars a pound.

That is the super grade — the kind that is plucked from the rabbit — but Mrs. Patrick has never sold any of that — why — well, she just couldn't pluck the fur out by the roots. She was told that the loose hair could be plucked but the rabbits would shake and she knew it hurt — so that was out as far as she was concerned—she sheared.

Shearing isn't easy, either—that is — not with the scissors. If you had the right kind of shears it would be all right — but the right kind of shears cost $50 and that is too much money — thinks Mrs. Patrick.

Shearing is fun for a little while — but you have to keep at it because the bunnies have to be sheared. At first she had to tie them but now they like it. They just hold still and let her snip — and all the beautiful long fur on the back is first grade for which she has gotten as high as $7.71 a pound. Then she turns the rabbit over on its back and shears its tummy and for that, which is grade 2, she gets a little less. The clean fur that is matted is grade three and then comes the fur that is matted and dirty — with maybe straw in it which will bring about 55 cents a pound.

The fur is put in 15 or 25 pound sacks, each sack graded. It is packed loose in a pasteboard box for shipment. The wool is then sent to the buyers located all over the country. Last time Mrs. Patrick sent to a place in New Jersey but this time she is going to send to Colorado. She has two big boxes she is getting ready that will have ten or 12 pounds.

She has a brush with which she brushes as she clips.

The rabbits are finicky about their eating. There are some kinds of pellets they like and some they just won't eat. They keep themselves clean, too, licking their fur just like a cat. They are excellent housekeepers — they keep their nests just as clean as can be and as soon as their babies get old enough they begin taking out the old dirty hay and fur little by little.

The pens are entirely of wire and all except those with the mothers and babies are kept outside. The rabbits can stand a lot of cold and so they will not be taken in until the weather is a lot colder. They must be sheared in the winter, too, Mrs. Patrick says. They are sheared every three months and it takes a lot of time—not only that—she often misses meals and the scissors rub blisters on her hands.

The pens must be kept very clean in order that the rabbits are kept healthy.

Each rabbit is in a separate pen and there is a reason for that — they don't get along very well together. When they are six or seven weeks old they are put in pens by themselves because they start to fight — some of them come out looking pretty ragged and some don't come out at all.

At one time Mrs. Patrick said she had 65 baby rabbits. She had no particular reason for going into such an industry — except — she just wanted to raise rabbits — and she found herself in business — about the busiest business she could have picked out. She started with 19 a year and a half ago and three weeks ago she had 80 — but they just butchered 49. They are really good eating, says Mrs. Patrick, seems like they are much easier to eat than they are to shear.

The children love them and beg their parents to buy some — but most parents shake their heads — they know if they start with a pair of rabbits their troubles will multiply — and so will the rabbits.

Mrs. Patrick has a littlle story she tells about her seven year old niece Pamela Mergen, who now lives in Colorado.

Pamela was sick one day at Mrs. Patrick's home and wanted to bring in one of the little rabbits — a little one about six weeks old and of course Auntie let her.

Down on the living room floor went the little girl and the rabbit and they had a big time. The rabbit liked being in the house — he wasn't afraid at all — and he liked being played with.

Pamela named him Pinky — but when evening came along Pinky was taken back to his pen and put in with all the other little baby rabbits that looked just like him.

Every time Pamela went to her aunt's home after that she wanted to see Pinky — she was certain that she knew just which one he was and always picked him out. She didn't realize that Pinky grew bigger all the time — to her she saw one little rabbit in every new bunch that was Pinky — Pinky stayed just the same size to her, and she was always sure that she knew just which one he was.

Well — it is quite a job — and Mrs. Patrick says she wouldn't advise anybody to go into the business unless they went into it in a great big way — a big enough way that it would pay them to buy a shearing machine — These rabbits are pretty — they are cute — they are fun — but there is "fur-fur" too much fur — she thinks she will change over to Chinchilla rabbits — they are just as good to eat and a lot less trouble — she won't have to shear them.

The Rabbits

The little white rabbit with great big eyes
Was sitting there looking so very wise
That no one would ever suspect that he
In any bad mischief could ever be,
But lo, he had gone to the cabbage bed
And tasted the leaves on each cabbage head—
And he dug his way to the carrots, too,
Where he'd chew and he'd nibble and nibble and chew.
When Johnny came out and saw what was done
He looked around for the guilty one
And the little white rabbit was so afraid
'Cause he'd ruined the garden that Johnny had made.
Then Johnny went over and pulled both his ears
'Till the little white rabbit's eyes filled with tears,
He never quite knew what he had done wrong
But that is why rabbits' ears are so long,
They never went back 'cause they weren't made of rubber
And all he could do was sit there and blubber
And that is the reason — so it is said —
A rabbit's eyes are always so red,
Because after that each little bunnie
Had such pink eyes and its ears are so funny —
But that never stopped them from their favorite diet—
When they see a garden they just have to try it.

Lions, C. of C. Join to Give Benefit Dance

TIPTON — A dance at Kueper Center next Thursday night, Nov. 20, is being held jointly by the Chamber of Commerce and the Lions Club. It will be in the form of a benefit for the Tipton Realty Company for its business building here. Any additional money left from the dance will go into the annual Santa Claus treat and street decorations.

Donation tickets of $1.00 each are being sold and will admit holders to the dance, music for which will be by the Lademann-Schwab and Lee Brandt orchestras.

There will be a number of attendance prizes and among them will be a ham donated by the Yontz Packing Company; a turkey given by the Gerbes Super Markets, Inc.; and a pair of girls' shoes donated by the Weber Shoe Company, Inc.

Making up the committee in charge of the event are Dr. H. P. and Nelson Stonner, W. C. Ream and John Latham.

Grand Opening days were held Saturday and Sunday at Doc Schroeder's Texaco Service.

Mr. Schroeder announces that his station, located in the south part of town on highway 50, was visited by many persons.

All persons present during the formal opening were presented favors, with attendance prizes going to Pat McDonald, Barnett, electric toaster; W. W. Mayfield, St. Louis, battery; Bob Ferguson, Tipton, electric clock and F. C. Swarner of Tipton, five quarts motor oil.

Mrs. Nelson Hall underwent an operation for an acute appendix attack at St. Mary's Hospital in Jefferson City shortly after midnight Tuesday. She is reported as doing very satisfactorily.

Following a stay of a week at St. Mary's Hospital in Jefferson City where she underwent surgery, Mrs. Gerbes returned to the family home here Monday and is convalescing.

Cletus Helms and Harland Stretz the co-sponsors of the junior class are directing the play "Headin' for the Hills," which will be given by the members of the class at the high school auditorium Friday night, November 14.

Miss Dolores Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Martin, has been named as a member of the Honors Convocation at the University of Missouri, Columbia, where the presentation is being held this Thursday. This is the second year that Miss Martin has been given this recognition. She is teaching music in the Ferguson schools.

Sgt. Jack Schouten, Sedalia, One of 17 Americans On Tiny Isle In Bering Sea, Just 300 Miles from Siberia

Setting Up Automatic Weather Station Takes Them to Very Remote Arctic Spot

"From the gray desolation of a fog - shrouded, tundra-covered island in the Bering Sea come reports on weather generally experienced only by silver foxes and caribou", reads the first paragraph of paper published at Andrews Air Force Base, Maryland, and continues with: "Only 300 miles from the coast of Siberia, the uninhabited island of St. Matthews makes a fair bid for the title of world's loneliest weather station. Yet, it was home and hearth for 14 men for nearly a month."

But, from that place of nowhere in the world come letters from a Sedalia boy, one of the 14, to Mother and Dad. He is Sgt. Jack Schouten, stationed in Alaska.

In the first letter dated July 11, Bering Sea, he wrote:

"Boy, you should be with me. I'm just going all over the land up here as you might know. I left Elmendorf last Sunday afternoon and arrived at Nome by plane. Monday morning we loaded on a ship and took off for St. Matthews Island. This makes the fifth day now and we are on our way back up to Gamble, Alaska. We waited over two days for the weather to clear up before we went in to look around, got almost to land when the boat got out of control and smashed into the rocks (that boat is no more). Everybody got wet, but nobody hurt bad.

"As there are no trees we finally got enough driftwood and got a fire started. In the meantime the fog had moved in again and it was seven hours later when another boat contacted us. They couldn't come in, so we stayed there all night — like to froze to death. The next day we got to the ship, cold and hungry. Capt. Willis, another captain, and myself were the only Air Force personnel, the rest were Navy. They have gone in several places around the island since, but I haven't. Now we are going to Gamble to get a boat en route to take the beach. It is one heck of a place. There is a lot of wild life, moose, caribou so there should be plenty of fresh meat.

"We picked up a cute little black dog when we left Anchorage and are taking him with us. We sure have a good time with him. So far he hasn't gotten air or sea sick and I might add I haven't either."

It was under Captain John T. Willis, the Air Weather Service team landed and lived on St. Matthew long enough to install an automatic weather station which mechanically sends out reports every three hours.

Then another letter from Jack to his mother and dad, dated August 6, from St. Matthews, Island.

"Well, we are still sitting out here in the middle of Bering Sea trying to get this thing called an automatic weather station to work. I don't believe that I have worked as hard in my life. A couple of months like this and I would really be in shape. Even though we have worked hard, and 15 to 16 hours a day, we have had a pretty good time. There are 17 of us all together.

"We are having a few programs which are to be expected, but our biggest one right now is food. We ate our last whole meal last night for supper and that was Spam. But all of our heavy work is over with now and so it won't take much for us. A ship is going to try to get in to us today or tomorrow, but the ocean is awful rough and I don't think they can. They have been trying to get a plane to us for the past two weeks but the weather is too bad. Right now you can see for about a mile, and the ceiling is only about 200 feet. That is as good if not better than it usually is and we have to have a ceiling of at least 25 to 3,000 feet before a plane can come in here, because of a rather large hill at the end of the lake where they have to land.

"I am on radio watch, and a weather observer tonight, and it is now 0345 in the morning. So far I drank eight cups of coffee but I'm still about to go to sleep.

"We have several little foxes that come around camp here and Johnny (our little black cocker) outside and he got a hold of one of them, didn't know what to do with it so they are out there playing now. John runs the fox up the hill and the fox runs Johnny back down. They sure look funny, Johnny with his short legs just a going, and the fox just lopes along.

"We have it pretty good here, there are some old huts that we fixed up and we have our sleeping quarters, radio shack, and eating place, plus a wash room. If you walk two miles here it seems like 50, but everything is real pretty, all green and little flowers growing out of the moss, but no trees. We are sitting about half way up a hill on a cliff right over the ocean, we have a hill behind us and on one off into a green flat pasture and then the lake. On the other side of the lake is a mountain called Sugar Loft about five miles from here. Then on our side is the ocean with a great long beach about five miles and that keeps washing in and out on the sand and rocks." Then Jack writes in red pencil to look at the picture on the other side of the paper. There he has drawn the whole thing he has just described and written in each hill, beach, ocean, cliff — or whatever might be in the picture.

"We burned out a capecitor in one of our transmitters yesterday that goes with the weather station, so we will not be about to broadcast until we can get a replacement for it. This is one reason I will be one of the last ones to leave here, because even after we get to broadcasting I will have to run a checking period on it. It sure is quite a little thing, but it has to be a pretty fine piece of equipment.

"I just got through talking to a station in the States over the radio — I couldn't hear very good but it was some place in Illinois. Also I have been listening to radio Tokyo most of the night. I can hear almost any country in the world. Right now I'm listening to a program from Ohoma, I'm supposed to stay on 420 MC's but that dang did idid dot gets pretty hard to take after awhile, besides I can't take code as fast as some of them put it out. I tune in every once in awhile to see if anybody is calling Easy Mike One EMI which is us, and that is enough.

"Well, it is time to get the troops up."

Except for maintenance crews which will check the solitary station once a year, few humans ever see the island of St. Matthew, uet, from it come a vital ingredient of Arctic operations, date on the weather on top of the world.

Sgt. Schouten, a weather technician, is married and has one child, Sharon Lee. His wife and daughter reside in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"That is the first time I ever deliberately sat in the rain," said a young girl who went to Columbia to see her first football game.

"That was silly, wasn't it?", she was asked.

"Yes," she agreed, "but—about 13,000 other people were doing the same thing — so it must have been all right."—H.L.

There seemed to be no cars around the church but the woman walked on in and looked around—strange there were no women there yet for the church dinner — she didn't think she was too early.

With her salad in one hand and a pie in another she walked on into the study of the pastor.

"Where is everybody?" she asked.

"I don't know" replied the surprised minister. "What is supposed to be going on?"

"Why the church dinner" said the woman.

"Oh", said the minister, "The church dinner is tomorrow."

— H. L.

"I wont' be home for lunch today", a woman employed downtown told her husband.

"Oh, yes you will", came the reply.

That wasn't like her husband—so she went on more carefully, "But I have a luncheon engagement today."

"No you haven't", said hubby and the woman who knew she did have a luncheon engagement began to wonder what was wrong with her usually agreeable husband.

"But I do have", insisted the woman. "Mary is having a luncheon today."

"No she isn't", said the husband emphatically.

The young woman looked at her husband puzzled — what had come over him — then he grinned: "Mary telephoned the other night and said she had to call the luncheon off — and I forgot to tell you."

So — the woman went home to lunch. — H. L.

Taft Hints at Cashing In On His Patronage Pledge

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1952, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Senator Taft telephoned General Eisenhower last week with a gentle reminder that he would like to make some recommendations for the cabinet.

Taft didn't press the matter or go into detail. Nevertheless, he left the implication that the Morningside Heights Breakfast pledge of Taft patronage int he Eisenhower administration had not been forgotten.

The General promised to consider carefully any suggestions Taft patronage in the Eisenhower said he was anxious to work closely with Taft on a legislative program.

Taft also suggested that one of the new administration's first aims should be to strengthen the judicial system and transfer to the courts some of the power now held by commissions.

If Taft gets the green light from Eisenhower on this, it will touch off about the bitterest legislative battle any recent congress has seen.

For, though Taft didn't spell it out, what he has in mind is a plan long discussed by representatives of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers to undercut and bypass such agencies as the Federal Power Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Federal Communications Commission.

These regulate power companies, gas - transmission lines, natural gas, the stock exchange, fair trade and competition, the railroads, bus and trucking lines, radio, television, telegraph and telephone. Most of these are branded as new deal agencies, though all but two—the FCC and SEC — were set up long before the Roosevelt administration, and the FCC actually was established on the foundation of Herbert Hoover's old Federal Radio Commission.

Truman Crony

For some years, big - business lobbyists have proposed shifting power from these agencies to the courts with the idea of weakening thier power. Actually, most court dockets are too crowded to handle work of this kind; second, federal judges are the last ones to relish handling regulatory questions.

Already the efficiency of some of these commissions has been undermined during the Truman administration, especially the Federal Power Commission. Truman appointed as its chairman, his old crony, ex- Sen. Mon Wallgren of Washington State, and Wallgren, an ex - jeweler, knew far less about electric power and natural gas than he did about poker.

After Wallgren's friend in the White House had the courage to veto the Kerr Bill permitting a price increase of natural gas to northern cities, Wallgren turned around and reversed the President. He gave Phillips Petroleum what Truman had refused to give.

Since then Wallgren has been replaced by a new chairman, Thomas Buchanan, who had the courage to crack down on the big gas companies. As a result, friends of the big gas and oil comopaonies in the Senate, led by Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, blocked his confirmation. He is now serving on an interim appointment and will be one of the first conscientious public servants sure to get the ax.

If Eisenhower, who has promised to keep the 5 - percenters out of Washington, also watches the 27-percenters, he can do a real job for the public. However, it will be through the appointment of good men to the commissions, not by weakening them.

Ike Notes

Eisenhower was swamped with about 9,000 letters and telegrams shortly after he arrived in Augusta. While touched at the tribute, he was also dismayed regarding replies. He hadn't had so much mail since this writer served as the funnel for sending Ike 18,000 Christmas cards last December. They were delivered by special airplane courier in Paris. . . .In the case of the Augusta mail, Ike got Senator Seaton of Nebraska to lend his executive assistant, Homer Grunther. He is now trying to get his head above the deluge of mail. . . .Mrs. Eisenhower had a terrible fright in Augusta just after the family arrived, when Mrs. John Eisenhower and the three grandchildren got separated. What happened was that Mrs. Ike, Jr., and the three children, riding in another car, got cut off by a motorcycle escort, and were forced to remain behind the rest of the motor caravan. It took an hour and a half for them to get through the crowds to the Country Club. Meanwhile Mamie was worried sick. . . .Eisenhower wasn't too anxious to take press - relations expert Jim Hagerty with him to Augusta, wasn't worried about press relations.

Which Ike Will He Receive?

Ike Must Soon Decide In Detail How He'll Use US Military Power

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Soon after he takes over the White House, Dwight D. Eisenhower will have to begin to decide in detail how he wants to use the nation's military power to bring about the kind of world the United States desires.

The decisions he makes may be among the most fateful of his presidential career. They involve questions of risks, and ultimately questions of war or peace ranking with the gravest decisions of the Truman administration.

President Truman faced the same question of the use of American power against the forces of communism but under different circumstances. For Eisenhower is slated to take over the government at a time when American strength is approaching its planned cold war peak. Tanks, guns and planes for U. S. and Allied forces are rolling off the production line in numbers unprecedented for a time when there is no great war.

The impending meeting between Eisenhower and Truman, and sessions between their aides, are expected to provide the general with the best information at the government's disposal on the kind of world he will have to deal with and the forces at his disposal.

While people may not know until secret documents are opened to future historians all the facts on which Eisenhower will have to make his major decisions, the main ideas of how American forces may theoretically be disposed and the chief purposes which may be served have been debated for a long time.

In highly simplified form here are the four main ideas:

Former President Hoover about two years ago advocated the development of an American Gibraltar on the Western Hemisphere. This apparently would mean a pulling back of United States forces from some of the far flung regions where they now operate and concentration of land, sea and air power in this hemisphere, the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and their principal islands.

Sen. Taft R-Ohio, when he was seeking his party's presidential nomination, advocated concentration on building up the defenses of the United States and friendly island nations such as Britain, Japan and the Philippines. In discussing specific problems that this theory wold not solve, however, he indicated that he favored continued close cooperation with the Western European powers on the continent.

President Truman has both advocated and put into practice a policy that consisted (1) of global alliances and (2) commitment of United States forces or military resources to any nation threatened by Russia which was willing to defend itself. Under this policy American forces went to fight in Korea and American arms are being supplied to many lands from Britain to Formosa.

President-elect Eisenhower has been identified with the successful operation of the Truman policy in Western Europe. Until he quit to run for president last spring, he was commander of the international army created by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

During the election campaign Eisenhower spoke out in favor of a worldwide system of Allies, including close consultation with the United States.

While his foreign policy was thus basically what those who call themselves internationalists consider truly international, Eisenhower's statements on all points have not coincided with equal exactitude with the policies of the Truman administration.

For example in the case of Korea he pledged himself to do everything possible and at once to get United States forces out of the front lines and to let Asians primarily defend the freedom of Asia. This could mean not only a speedup in the training and employment of South Korean forces to replace U. N. units; it could also mean the employment of some Chinese Nationalist divisions from Formosa.

On another point Eisenhower has committed himself to do all he can—he specified "by peaceful means"—to bring about the liberation of the satellite nations of the Soviet Union. Strong measures to that end would involve a certain amount of risk of strong reaction from the Russian side.

In Korea Eisenhower, according to his campaign speeches, would have United States forces assume a reserve role as rapidly as possible. The American "first team" would no longer be pitted against, or tied down by, the enemy's so-called second team.

The liberation policy which Eisenhower advocated is linked to the basic question of the use of force in another way because such a policy would hardly be possible unless the United States was willing to take whatever risks might be involved in stirring up trouble, even by propaganda means, in Iron Curtain territory.

Any nation's foreign policy must be based upon its real power — military, economic, moral and other. Insofar as the United States is concerned there are three overall problems which this principle applies to directly:

1. Military dispositions for defense—United States forces have been deployed since the end of World War II in Japan and other Far Pacific islands, in Korea and in Western and Central Europe. United States weapons have gone to many additional places to strengthen friendly or Allied forces.

One of the criticisms directed against this disposition has been that it spread American power too thin and that this country was attempting to hold too much territory by direit rommitment of United States forces.

In a speech at New York last August Eisenhower said this country "must be committed to security forces of such mobility and offensive impact that their retaliatory readiness and the massive potential of their blows will haunt the Kremlin with nightmares of the punishment to be visited upon Russia should it violate the peace."

Truman administration officials have held a somewhat similar concept. Eisenhower's idea of the "mobility" of American forces would not necessarily mean a change in present policy but it could be a basis for such a change when read in the light of statements by other Republicans.

2. Force as a base for diplomatic strategy — In general, in dealing with a country like Russia, any American or Allied maneuver is likely to be effective to the extent that it can be backed up with adequate force of some kind, military, economic or political. Republican foreign policy adviser John Foster Dulles, while still a bi-partisan consultant in the State Department last spring, advocated that the United States should rely less on trying to protect many countries by committing its forces to them and should try instead a warning to Russia not to start any more Koreas. There has been speculation Eisenhower may have leaned toward this ultimatum device when he talked about the concept of a mobile reserve to be supplied the Free World by the United States.

What Dulles proposed was that Washington should tell Moscow flatly and officially that if any other free nation was attacked by Communist forces the United States would feel free to strike back at Russia itself. That would only work if the United States had the force available to strike instantly and powerfully.

2. The concept of preventive war—This has usually come up publicly in a negative way. Some people have advocated privately that the United States should pick the time and place for the conflict with Russia which the advocates consider inevitable. But they have seldom carried their case to the country. Instead President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson have given currency to the idea by denouncing it. They apparently felt it had too much appeal to ignore.

Some officials and observers of foreign policy developments believe that this may be in the long run the most expensive issue which Eisenhower will have to deal with. He will be president at a time when the United States and Allied powers, whatever their continuing problems, will have shaken off many of the weaknesses which the Truman administration has been primarily concerned to eliminate.

In a speech at San Francisco Oct. 6 Eisenhower seemed to reject the idea of using force as a desirable means of resolving the conflict with Communism. He said appeasement "is a proven folly" and declared that a second course would be to adopt an "agressive attitude and so markedly increase the risk of global war."

He indicated his preference for the third of his three courses which he said "is to prosecute the cold war in which we now find ourselves with vigor and wisdom."

Tradition Makes Americans Visit Air Works In Europe

ENROUTE FROM EUROPE (AP)—Notes from a travel diary:

Going through Europe builds you down and tears you up. It confuses an out-of-towner.

As a visitor, your duty is always to go and loyally inspect the famous local ruins, shake your head and ponder aloud how such a wonderful civilization could perish.

The next thing is to admire the local art works.

For some reason beyond his own actual desires the tourist is supposed to be panting to creak his neck upward at the famous top-of-the-wall drawings of Michaelangelo and his students.

The brave fact, of course, is that most visitors are more interested in the present day-to-day life of Europeans than in inspecting some mothy paintings of centuries ago they already have had to study since they quit chasing fireflies.

Culture is a grand thing, and heaven knows we all admire it, but there is no particular reason except tradition for a visting American to think the faded grandur of a renaissance wall is superior to the clean splendor of a utilitarian Rockefeller Center skyscraper.

To me, no matter how many guide books I study, the Sistine Chapel is no more inspiring than the cathedral reach of the Empire State building at dawn or dusk.

They have their inferiority complexes about us and we have ours about them. I say our towering group art, just because it reflects a group genius, isn't therefore less worthy than the lofty grope of individual genius that they admire.

Take the painting of "The Last Supper," a famous relic from the brush of Leonaro da Vinci that was fortunately spared — and accidentally spared — by allied bombings that crumbled three convent walls around it.

Time has been less kind to the efforts of the bold and wistful brush of long ago. An Italian friend said:

"Go and see it — The Last Supper. All that is left is crumbs."

I went. They were trying to restore the flaking strokes of the vanished master. Throughout Europe you find this often — the attempt to restore a fading color opus of some heralded maestro of the brush.

But in many cases the reproductions we studied in childhood are better than the remnants. Sometimes to see them in being is a sad shock, like leaving your mother young and fair and returning in after years to find her bent and old. Such was the feeling I had on actually viewing "The Last Supper" on a wall in Milan.

Mark Twain once bitterly remarked that anything was immortal that was remembered 100 years. Well I feel culture is only the nucleus you cling to of all the things you are exposed to, the central hulk with meaning and feeling.

And after being exposed to all the antique art of Europe, I like to feel that a hundred years from now I could come home on a Long Island train at twilight and see the swordfish tower of the Chrysler Building stab a dying sky and still know a sense of warmness and belonging that I think is the effect of true art.

The thing about most American art is that we have, in a larger measure than any people before us, built our art so deeply into our daily lives that we, as well as the rest of the world, sometimes miss its spaciousness.

Can't you just visualize a visitor from Mars, studying his guide book and saying to a friend:

"Well, we only have a few hours left on Earth. What do you want to see—Times Square, the Pyramids or a painting by that fellow Raphael in Rome?"

And don't you know the answer any honest tourist would give?

In 1951 U. S. bituminous coal usage increased by about 18 million tons, or 4 per cent over 1950.

ME and Rocky. What was this all about? "Listen, you don't have to be afraid to talk to me," Torchy said soothingly. "I know all about your deal—I know you were shoving the queer for Rocky—I'm not kicking about that, it's your business."

I tried hard to digest it.

He waved a finger in my face. "The point is, what did you come here for? You looking to make another tie-up?"

"Well . . . I was thinking . . ."

"You was thinking," he mimicked, falsetto. His voice abruptly switched. "What's about you and Griscomb?"

"I already told you, Torchy. That's the straight goods."

"What did you heist him for?"

"Just because I got sore, that's all. Because he pulled that gun on me for nothing. All I was doing was walking near his place, looking—"

"Looking for what?"

"Looking for my girl."

"And now does she get into this?" Torchy was getting louder now, forgetting all about buttering me up.

"She's zany, Torchy. She causes me more trouble than a case of the hives."

"That girl came here and said she was looking for Rocky Silone.'

"She did! The zany little—Just shows you what I've got to put up with, Torchy. All the time."

He wasn't amused. "Why'd she say that?"

"That's what I'd like to know. Let' go get her and squeeze some words out of her, the little flea-brain."

He got out of his chair. "Listen, boy—I'm going to give you one more chance. I want the whole story. Why the girl came here, why you came nosing around, and all the rest of it. Understand?"

His open hand slammed against my cheek and nose. My cheek stung. My eyes smarted.

I said hoarsely. "Bring the girl here and I'll—"

My whole brain exploded with black fire.

PAIN sat on my skull like a weight, a chunk of brass. I wanted to stay still, not move, not monkey with that pain. But I'd have to get going sometime. I tried to work my hands. There was nothing there—just a distant numbness—the rope had choked off the blood. I moved my shoulders; I could feel them, at least. There was something loose in the whole arrangement. I was trussed tight as a mummy. But one of the spokes in the backrest seemed to be dangling out of its hole. That sock on the head—it must have sent me and the chair crashing now. I sat up off the chair as much as I could. I leaned back.

The man against the wall still seemed to be sleeping—Steve, that was him name, I remembered now.

I gingerly moved my arms down as far as they could go. Slowly, tantalizingly, the loop of rope slipped down off the spoke.

My wrists were still bound tight, but they were free of the chair. And the pressure was off my ankles. I sat down again and lifted my feet out of the loop of rope—

Footsteps on the stairs.

Steve started.

I jerked my ankles together to catch the loose rope—closed my eyes. Steve was watching the doorway. I lowered my head slowly, chin on chest, and watched through slightly parted lids.

Two men came in the doorway. One young and lanky looked a little like Steve, but afflicted with a twisted, camel-backed nose. The other huskier, old, gray at temples and jowls, a big head squatting on a thick neck and cylindrical body.

"What's it all about?" said the lanky one, with a lot of nose in his voice. "Where's Torchy?"

"That's what I want to know," Steve said sourly. "I'm getting fed up. How's about one of you guys taking over?"

"What's the crum want?"

"Torchy's still trying to find out. He thinks this guy was shoving for Rocky."

There it was again; Rocky and "shoving"—counterfeit dough.

"What's the matter with Torchy anyway?" the Nose said. "Can't he keep these crums off the place?"

The older man tapped his buddy's arm. "Let's go."

"Wait a minute," the Nose said. "Steve, you got the key to that room?"

"Torchy's holding on to that," Steve said.

The Nose started out. The older man grasped his arm and tagged after him. I heard their voices tangling all the way up the stairs.

• • •

I WOKE up right away. I shook my head. I groaned. I stared around the room.

"About time," Steve said.

"Okay, I'm ready to talk," I said. "Come here."

"I can hear you."

"I . . ." I hunted around. There had to be some way to budge this guy. "I need you over here. I . . . I've got some coke in my shoe," I said quickly. "I need a sniff. Just a little sniff."

"Who you trying to kid?"

"No kidding about this, Steve—I'm shaky as a bedspring. Let me get a pinch of it, that's all. . . I'll tell you what—I'll let you keep the rest. Sell it."

"I never touch the junk."

"I've got to have it, I tell you." I was really working pep into the act. "If I don't get it, I'll raise the roof."

"You raise the roof and I'll raise your scalp."

I let out a holler—not too loud. His chair came off the wall with a bang. "Okay, bud, you asked for it." He came lazily toward me, gripping the pistol by the barrel.

I shot my foot up between his legs. I put everything into that kick—all my frustrations, all my resentment at being tied and being conked.

Missourians Should Boast Like Texas, Editors Are Told

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Missouri editors should shout more about their state because they have the stuff to shout about, Chester A. Bradley, Missouri Notes editor of the Kansas City Star, says.

Bradley spoke yesterday at a meeting of the Missouri Press Association.

"Let's talk like Texans," Bradley told the 200 editors. "After all, it is easy to say Texas is a great state because a Missourian started it and the state capital is named after him."

Mrs. June Campbell of Deep - water and Mrs. Anna Lee Griffith of Mineral community, were honored by the Missouri News - writers Association for outstanding work as country correspondents.

The activities of all Red Cross Chapters gather impetus as the winter season approaches. This is very much the case with the Pettis County Chapter as virtually every day is marked by some important meeting or service.

The amateur radio operators of this area, with Herbert Young as president, are now meeting on a regular weekly schedule at the Red Cross office. These men have placed themselves and their avocation at the disposal of the Red Cross, and should the emergency arise, will be indespensable.

Host Finds Reward

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Because he was giving an oyster supper for the chairman of the licensing court, Graham Ward went to the trouble of having some special oysters flown in from a coast town 60 miles away.

While eating Ward felt something hard in his mouth. Sure enough it was a pearl, a quarter-inch in diameter which experts later assessed as being of considerable value.

Young General Builds Europe Air Defenses

FONTAINEBLEAU, France, Nov. 15 (AP)—During World War II, Lauris J. Norstad was one of the boy wonder generals of the U. S. Air Force.

Today, at 45, he is the youngest man in the U. S. armed forces to wear the four stars of a full general. His assignment is to build up the aerial defense of Central Europe.

As commander-in-chief of Allied Air Forces, Central Europe, Norstad is responsible for air defense from the base of the Jutland Peninsula to the Alps—the rich heartland of Europe. In the event of attack, it is generally expected this would be the first target.

After about 18 months of work Norstad believes "we have arrived at a point where we could do something useful."

He says this with a certain pride of accomplishment, but with a warning that there is still a long way to go in welding together the forces put at his disposal by France, Great Britain, the United States, Belgium, Holland and Canada.

Although it's been 22 years since he graduated from West Point, Norstad still could be a model for the cadets. His back is poker straight and his shoulders geometrically squared. He stands 6 feet 2 inches and weighs about 165 pounds. His thick curly blond hair is always carefully arranged.

He was Gen. Eisenhower's handpicked man as his top air commander. The Central European Air Headquarters were activated at the same time as Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe SHAPE.

From that time, when practically all he had was a title and a mission, Gen. Norstad has worked ceaselessly to get the planes on the ground and the crews in a high state of readiness.

Norstad can point to these achievements:

1. In the first Central European air maneuver in late April, 1951, there were 500 planes operating from 10 airfields. In an exercise in June, 1952, there were 1,400 aircrafts flying from 45 bases. In the latest exercise 44 of the 54 air squadrons participating were jets. The number of planes is increasing monthly. The goal is 2,500 aircraft by the end of 1952.

2. The number of airfields with runways of 8,000 feet, which are capable of handling all types of aircraft, was increased in a ratio of 3 to 1.

3. Taxiways permitting better parking of aircraft and faster takeoffs after an alert have been expanded greatly.

4. A radar screen from Northern Germany to the Alps is in operation several hours a day. It is hoped to have the equipment and personnel for 24-hour-a-day operation by the end of this year.

5. A new headquarters, dispersed over 100 acres of a former royal hunting reserve near Fontainebleau, is in operation.

6. Morale has soared.

Norstad is the son of a Norwegian Lutheran minister in Minneapolis.

On graduation from West Point in 1930, he chose the cavalry but soon shifted to the Air Corps and graduated from the advanced flying school in December, 1931.

In November, 1940, he became assistant chief of staff for intelligence at General Headquarters Air Force at Langley Field, Va., and in the early stages of the war, while a major, had occasion to check documents from time to time with Brig. Gen. Eisenhower at the Pentagon.

There is no indication that Gen. Eisenhower took notice of him at that time, but later, in North Africa, the two met again and in his book "Crusade in Europe," Eisenhower said, "It was on this occasion his arrival in Oran that I first met Lt. Col. Lauris Norstad, a young Air Force officer, who so impressed me with his alertness, grasp of problems, and personality that I determined thereafter never to lose sight of him. He was, and is, one of those rare men whose capacity knows no limit."

DINING UNDER THE PALMS—Patrons of the Parisian cabaret, "Cafe Society," have to "hand" it to the manager of the night club for thinking of a novel type of wall decoration. The enterprising proprietor decorates the walls of his establishment with handprints of famous guests, preserved in plaster. One non-conformist refused a handprint, but left his footprint instead.

Hans Christian Andersen, author of children's fairy tales, is said to have disliked children.

BRITAIN LOVES THIS PICTURE—The graciousness and loveliness that has so endeared Queen Elizabeth II to her people is displayed in this remarkable photograph. It was taken by United Press photographer Charles James Dawson, as the queen rode in her Irish state coach to open Parliament. Prime Minister Winston Churchill was so impressed by the picture that he telephoned the United Press in London and said: "Please send me two 18-inch by 12-inch enlargements of that wonderful photograph of the queen." Public demand for reproductions of the picture is growing day by day.

Untie Those Apron Strings

Sedalia mothers might be asked, "Is your child a skirt clinger?"

Many children are weakened morally and mentally by oversolicitude and too much direction on the part of their parents, says the National Kindergarten Association.

Parenthood is a continuously unfolding profession, they remind us. Most parents do not recognize parenthood as a profession at all, says the Association but this may be because it is so generally practiced without proper preparation.

When such preparation is sadly belated, one of the first lessons for some parents should be "Watch and guide your children," but for many others, it should be, "Hands off." Many children are suffering from the lack of parental assistance in their problems, but a surprising number are being weakened by oversolicitude, says the Association.

"Don't let your child be a skirt clinger," cautions a wise child psychologist. One well - educated woman, points out the Association, actually sang lullabies to her daughter regularly, even when she was in junior high school. That same daughter, now a college graduate and just released from a responsible position, telephoned her mother the morning after her wedding reception, and asked, "Where shall we go on our honeymoon, Mother?" But, says the Association, "what else could the mother expect? In every way, since the girl was a small curlyhead, she had trained her daughter to be a leaner, to let others do most of her thinking for her.

Contrast this upbringing with that of a young boy, reared by parents whose chief desire for their son is a steady growth toward honorable, independent manhood. The boy now has a paper route, has regular home responsibilities, runs errands for the neighbors, is one of a dozen boys who have a junior enterprise project, and when Mom and Dad go out for an evening he takes care of his smaller sisters.

One of the association's workers, in chatting with the boys, discussed a question that had to do with world affairs. Neither knew the answer.

"When I don't know, I call the public library," the worker confessed.

"I do that sometimes, but usually I look it up in our Children's Encyclopedia," the well-informed youngster replied.

Says the Association:

"If we teach our children to picture themselves as being self-reliant and capable of handling responsibilities, they will be far more able to measure up to this ideal than if we constantly discourage them in every new venture."

Even very young children, observes the Association, feel more important if they are permitted to pay the fare on busses and street cars, to answer the telephone, take simple messages. If, while still young they are allowed to help with the dishes and with the care of their rooms and clothes, they will love to do these things, and soon they will be generally helpful around the house.

Too many mothers and fathers fail in the rearing of their children because they do not prepare them for emotional maturity, the Association says. Character building begins at home, and some of the old ideas regarding child training have been found wanting and so they have given way to new ones that parents need to understand.

Most child psychologists agree that you should put your child on his own two feet.

John Dewey's admonition, "Teach your child to think, not what to think," is excellent philosophy.

Old Coins

Gold Coins Issued For 84 Years, Some Odd Denominations

By Bill Hert

During the 84 years that gold coins were issued, by the United States, there were several odd denominations coined. However, for various reasons, most of these were short lived.

The most popular of these were the gold dollars which were issued from 1849 thru 1889.

Owing to their small size, they were not used to a great extent as a medium of exchange, although in most dates they were issued or struck in large numbers. They are not as scarce as may be imagined. There were two different sizes of these coins issued, the first of these struck, 1849, were the small type, one - half inch in diameter

In 1854 the design and also the size was changed. This new type was larger in diameter, but not as thick, the content of gold in each of the types was the same, and this size was continued until their end, in 1889.

The gold dollars were coined at the main mint in Philadelphia and, also, at four of the U. S. branch mints.

All of these dollars command a premium. However, those from the branch mints that carry the mint letters of D, O, C and S, which letter is found under the wreath on the reverse or 'tails' side, are worth the most premium, owing to the small number made at these mints.

Perhaps the most popular use of the gold dollars, during their day, was their being made into jewelry, such as earrings, tiepins, bracelets, etc.

In 1854, another denomination of gold coin began a short life in the U. S. coinage, this being the three dollar coin.

In diameter, it was about the same as the five dollar gold piece, but not as thick. This coin was authorized to facilitate postal transactions when the letter rate was made 3-cents. This coin was very unpopular and was never circulated to any great extent and when the postal rate was changed from 3-cents, the piece was discontinued, this being 1889.

These coins, are worth a premium, as with all gold coins A few (1873, 1875 and 1876) run in the thousand - dollar - per - coin class, as only 20 to 50 coins of these years were struck.

A very scarce gold coin, however, never struck for general circulation, but available today if you care to pay the price, is the four dollar gold piece, known to the collector as the 'Stella', so - called for the star inscribed on the coin. These were made in two different designs and dated with two different dates, 1879 and 1880.

In 1879 the secretary of state, in an attempt to stimulate foreign trade, asked the secretary of the treasury to investigate the possibilities of a coin that would most nearly equal the common trading units of important commercial nations. The result was the four dollar gold piece, which was then conveniently close in value to the French twenty francs, the Spanish twenty pesetas, the Italian twenty lira and the British pound.

The officials became so enthusiastic about the idea that they struck off enough sample gold pieces (about 600) to present one to each member of Congress. This form of lobbying, however, was ineffective. Congress pocketed the coins and forgot to enact the authority for the coinage. Today a set, four different pieces of the Stella, will bring around $4500.

Among tne scarce gold coins, and these were not struck by any U. S. mint, are the fifty dollar gold pieces. These particular coins were struck by private assayers and companies from 1830 to 1855.

Upon the discovery of gold in California and the influx of prospectors and traders, there was an immediate need for a medium of exchange other than the unwieldy bags of gold dust. These firms struck gold coins in all denominations. The lack of money during the gold rush period in California was so serious that the federal government permitted the issuance of gold coins by these private firms.

All of these private issue gold coins bring large premiums. The fifty dollar pieces bring, from $500 to well in the thousands, per coin, and were made in two different shapes, round and octagon.

It would not be possible to close this discussion of odd gold coins without mentioning the 'cute' little gold quarters and half - dollars.

These, of course, are real small and, like the fifty dollar gold coins, were not coined by the U. S. mint, but by the private companies. They are too small to be practical, but nevertheless fill an important part in the coin collector's world. Thousands of these little coins have been counterfeited, brass, gold plated, and sold to the tourist trade in California. And many, if not most, of those in the hands of non -collectors are not the genuine pieces. These pieces usually have the word Eureka or a bear upon them, while the genuine pieces always have the word dollar or the abbreviation, "Dol." under the ¼ or ½ denomination.

Town Loses Whistle Timepiece

ROCKVILLE, Ind. — (AP) —Folk here have been arriving late to work and for appointments recently and children have been tardy at school.

The Rockport Republican explains everybody had depended on a lumber company steam whistle that could be heard all over town at 7:30 and 8 a. m. daily. The town clock had stopped long ago.

But the lumber company installed a new electric whistle that can't be heard outside its immediate neighborhood.

A Democrat class ad will do it.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson Were First--

There Are Precedents for Truman Meeting Ike to Brief New President on Problems

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP) — Herbert Hoover sat gravely on a long red divan, Franklin D. Roosevelt in a chair beside him; they smoked nervously, drank orange juice and talked for hours.

Light from a late afternoon winter sun shone dimly through heavy draperies on the portraits of past presidents in the red room of the White House.

The air was filled with tension, an overpowering strain, a mental tug of war—and some distrust and hostility.

That was the setting the last time an outgoing president faced his successor, the triumphant leader of an opposing political party, to try to smooth some of the bumps in the transfer of power.

Things didn't go well that long afternoon of Nov. 22, 1932, nor in the weeks that followed. While the nation sank into a pit of bank panic and general despair, Roosevelt and Hoover could not agree on their roles in the crisis; each pointed to the other with the finger of blame.

Almost 20 years to the day later, President Harry S. Truman and President-elect Eisenhower meet Tuesday against a backdrop that in some ways is similar.

Again, tremendous problems press down on them—war in Korea, threats of a bigger war, a persistent crisis in Iran, inflation at home.

Again, the outgoing President apparently feels urgently that decisions of long-range significance, on matters that demand attention now, must reflect the views of the man who has no office but will assume power soon.

The exact nature and extent of their co-operation remains to be worked out, probably at the White House meeting.

But unlike the tragic era 20 years ago, prospects for closer ties seem bright. Already, in the naming of Eisenhower liaison representatives to key agencies, an unprecedented step has been taken.

And a look at the past reveals that, despite the troubled relations between Hoover and Roosevelt, there's been more co - operation than bitterness between the political foes involved in shifts of power in the White House.

Of the 41 such transitions in U. S. history, only four have been shrouded in unpleasantries ranging from coolness to downright scorn and bitterness. Some changes have been causes for celebration even by outgoing presidents.

The most tragic transition period of all was between James Buchanan and Abraham Lincoln in 1860-61. After Lincoln's election Buchanan felt powerless; Lincoln was a silent spectator, scrupulously avoiding any statement of policy, while the Union was dissolved and America headed into civil war.

Until this year, the problem has been complicated by a longer period between the election of a president and his installation. Presidents formerly took over in March after their election in November, four months back. Now they take office Jan. 20, a little over two months after the election.

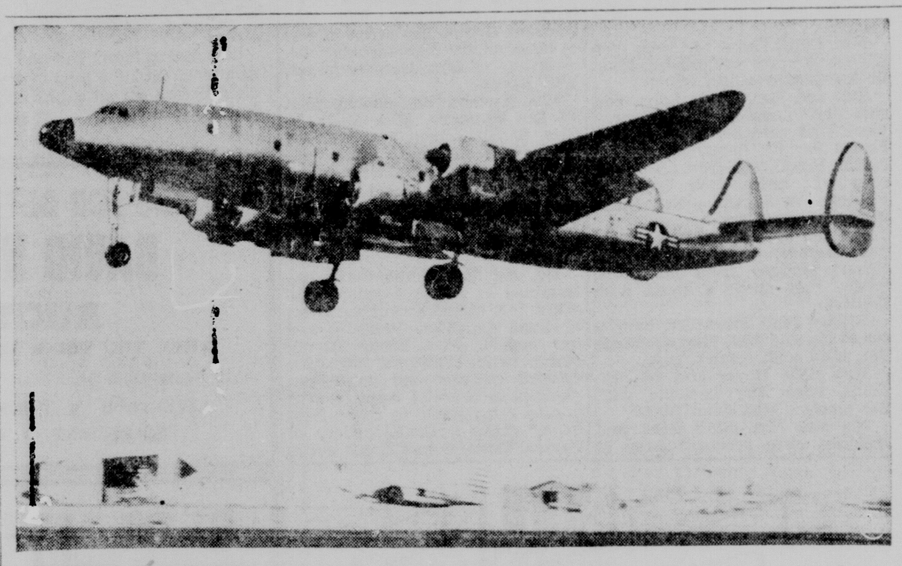
"You have turned me out; you have turned me out!" was the bitter greeting John Adams, Federalist, gave Thomas Jefferson, his Republican successor in 1801. That was the first transition period between opposing political powers.

Adams and Jefferson set the precedent of face-to-face meetings to try to iron out difficulties. But Adams failed in an effort to get commitments from Jefferson on the size of the Navy or the national eotm Adams responded with a series of "midnight" appointments to office in the last minutes of his administration—an act that stirred up a storm. The appointments were repudiated by Jefferson.

Twenty-eight years later, the Republicans under John Quincy Adams surrendered the White House to Democrat Andrew Jackson, and the air was so full of controversy and bitterness that Jackson vowed never to go near the retiring president. Jackson refused to make the customary courtesy call at the executive mansion and Adams told friends he would refuse to attend the inauguration ball even if invited.

The next change in power, from Democrat Martin Van Buren to Whig William Henry Harrison in 1841, set the pattern of amiability. The debonair Van Buren invited Harrison to his exclusive Saturday night social hours and even offered to vacate the White House ahead of time.

The transition period was relatively quiet in 1849 and 1853. After the troubled Buchanan-Lincoln period, the energetic Democrat, Grover Cleveland, wrested the White House from the Republicans and Chester Alan Arthur in 1885. Cleveland was involved in four transitions and each of them was noted for pleasantries.



FASTEST TRANSPORT—Powered by four turbo-compound engines, the Lockheed Super Constellation takes to the air for the first time, at Burbank, Calif. With a top speed approaching 400 miles per hour, and a cruising speed of almost 350 miles per hour, it is believed to be America's fastest transport plane. The black nose of the ship contains radar equipment, which will be installed on planes produced for military usage.

Cleveland welcomed Republican Benjamin Harrison in 1889, attended inauguration ceremonies and praised Harrison's speech. Their wives especially expressed admiration for each other. Harrison was equally gracious when Cleveland in turn ousted him in 1893.

Republican William Howard Taft is described by historians as one of the most cheerful observers at the inauguration of Democrat Woodrow Wilson in 1913. He promised Wilson, "We will all be behind you."

Wilson later came up with a bold suggestion on the problems of the period of transition. When it appeared he had been defeated for re-election, Wilson wrote his secretary of state proposing that the secretary and vice president resign. Wilson planned to appoint Charles Evans Hughes, his Republican opponent, as secretary of state. Then Wilson would resign and under the law then, Hughes would have taken over the presidency without waiting until March. But Wilson won a surprise victory at the polls and the plan was quickly discarded.

The period between the election of FDR and his assumption of office was stirred by storms.

Repeatedly, in telegrams and letters (one written by Hoover in longhand), in three face-to-face meetings, in a telephone call in the middle of the night before Roosevelt's March 4 inauguration, Hoover argued that he alone was powerless to meet crises at home and abroad and pleaded desperately for Roosevelt's co-operation.

"The Democratic controlled Congress would take no action without his (Roosevelt's) approval," Hoover wrote in his memoirs. "On the foreign front, my positive influence was ended as no foreign government would come to an agreement with me unless they knew that Mr. Roosevelt approved it...

"With all the fanning of fear, the country was off in a full cry of a general panic of bank depositors... Yet there was little that an outgoing administration could do while handcuffed by a hostile Congress and an unco-operative president-elect...A statement from Roosevelt even at this date could probably have stopped the panic. In any event, I could have stopped it if I had had his support . . . (But) Roosevelt declined all our suggestions."

Hoover implies Roosevelt's lack of collaboration was due to a partisan desire to build Roosevelt's own prestige.

Hoover had urged Roosevelt's approval of immediate negotiations with foreign countries on economic problems, including joint appointment of U. S. spokesmen; a statement by Roosevelt decrying rumors he planned to devalue the currency, and building confidence in banks; Roosevelt approval of an executive order stopping payments to depositors except for necessities; appointment by Roosevelt of personal representatives to key government agencies, much as Eisenhower has done.

Roosevelt suggested that joint action would be "improper for me and inadvisable for you...It would be unwise for me to accept an apparent joint responsibility with you when, as a matter of constitutional fact, I would be wholly lacking in any attendant authority."

The President-elect thought Hoover had power to close banks, or limit withdrawals, without his approval or congressional consent. He disagreed with many of the policies advocated by Hoover for joint action. A note in Roosevelt's private papers sums up his attitude thus:

"I was a private citizen wholly without authority, express or implied...For me to have taken part in the daily relations between the executive and the Congress would have been not only improper, but wholly useless...For the president-elect to dabble with superficial remedies would have been to impair or destroy the efficacy of the drastic, far-reaching actions which were put into effect in the 'one hundred days immediately following March 4. To attack one symptom by weak methods would have impaired the broad attack on a score of fronts which came later. No participation by me as a private citizen would have prevented the crisis; such participation in details would have hampered thorough-going action under my own responsibility as president."

Teen Age Dope Addicts Have Own Hospital on Tiny Island

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Riverside is a 150-bed hospital on tiny, windswept North Brothers Island in the East River. It is the nation's first and only institution specially set up to help teen-age narcotics users.

It opened in July—the result of insistent demands by welfare groups, the press and public that New York City must do something about the rising tide of drug addiction among school-age boys and girls.

The staff is find that "kicking" the habit is easy. Keeping it "kicked" is something else again.

When the first patients arrived, the 10-year-old building—erected but never used as a city tuberculosis sanitarium—was in the preliminary stages of conversion.

Painters, plumbers, carpenters are still all over the place, putting on the final touches. There are about 60 male patients now, aged between 14 and 21. The first few girls were admitted early in October.

The basic premise on which Riverside is working is that drug addiction is not a disease, but a symptom of deep mental distress. For most of the patients, the staff believes, the root lies in poverty, slums and broken homes.

Dr. Jerome Leon, hospital director, said that so far only a couple of patients have been discharged with the staff's consent. It will be a long time — even years — before much of the work can be measured on the yardstick of cure.

"The hospitals at Lexington and Ft. Worth provide some services for adolescents," Dr. Leon said. "But essentially both of them are prison hospitals with drug withdrawal centers. They have attempted therapy, but it hasn't proved too effective because they haven't been able to provide followup care."

Riverside is establishing a separate clinic in which to continue treatment after youths have been released.

"Addition is the least important part of the problem," Dr. Leon said. "Taking these patients off drugs is easy. It can be done for the most advanced cases in 10 days and for most of them in five.

"We use the attenuated withdrawal method—gradual withdrawal of drugs over a period of time—and not 'cold turkey,' or sudden, complete withdrawal. We have disproved one theory: that young addicts don't have withdrawal symptoms of pain, nausea and perspiration.

"They do have them, just as the older addicts do. But we think that every addicts' threshhold of pain is lower. Withdrawal symptoms in a normal person would be about as uncomfortable as an attack of the grippe."

Normal adolescents, said Dr. Jerome, don't become addicted to narcotics.

"They may experiment with drugs but they give them up when they find narcotics don't solve any problems for them. Drug addicts are like alcoholics — both have found a chemical retreat from reality."

Auto Sails 275 Feet After Road Runs Out; Driver Killed In Crash

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — An automobile failed to stop at the end of a dirt road and sailed about 275 feet through the air last night, crashing into the concrete pier of a bridge under construction and killing the driver.

He was identified by papers on the body was Franklin Boisseau, 18, of Belleville.

St. Clair deputy sheriffs said the car cleared one concrete pier 75 feet from where the road ended and crashed into the second one, about 200 feet farther on, some 20 feet above the ground.

The auto was smashed almost flat.

The deputies said the road, not intended for traffic, eventually is to be paved and the bridge completed to connect Belleville with U. S. Highway 50.

The bridge is being built over a low section known as Dutch Hollow.
